Willkie Calls On Women To 'Rekindle' Youth's Faith

In Detroit Speech, He Says New Deal 'Cynics' Fail to Foster Belief in Democracy

The Day in Politics

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE, though conceding that he had sponsored an anti-third term resolution in the Coolidge administration, announced his support for President Roosevelt again. Page 3.

FORMER NATIONAL Democratic Chairman Farley, long opposed to a third term, opened the party's New York State convention without a mention of the national ticket. Gov. Lehman, however, urged Roosevelt's reelection. Page 3.

Task for the Women

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 30.—Wendell L. Willkie tonight called on women to "rekindle the faith" of American youth and he promised if elected to clean "cynics and unbelievers" out of Washington.

He charged the New Deal is run by "cynics" who have failed to foster belief in the American system. Disillusioned, he said, thousands of youths have formed Communist groups "and have received encouragement from high places."

His campaign message to women was cheered by 15,000 hearers as he repeatedly struck at the "don't change horses" argument for a third term.

"What are we doing in the middle of the stream?" he asked. "How did we get there? The man who got us in is not the right one to get us out."

Believes In Civil Service

Aside from "routing the brain trusters on special trains out of Washington," he said no great changes in the Government's set-up are necessary to "change horses."

Washington's civil service employes—"the men who do the work"—he promised would be retained and strengthened, under him, as will every vital defense function.

"No man believes more strongly in civil service than I do," he said, "and no administration ever had less faith in it than the present one."

William S. Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., Sidney Hillman and others he pledged would be continued on the defense commission, "and will work better with me 'because they know and understand me.'"

He assailed the President's failure to name a chairman to guide them, because "even a church social needs a chairman."

"Elect a Churchill in America"

Earlier in the day he had opened this new phase of his campaign. At a half dozen stops through Southern Michigan he had drummed away on the third term issue, replying to "crisis" contentions.

He had cited England's cabinet change during stress of war.

"Elect a Winston Churchill in America," he shouted at one place. "Away with Chamberlain governments. Let's preserve American democracy."

Germans Attack By Hundreds On Southern English Shores

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Oct. 1—The fury of Germany's twenty-fourth consecutive overnight air assault on London fell on the suburbs today as only a few of the Nazi raiders braved the central district's massed guns, newly reinforced above ground-fire range by a cruising patrol of British night fighter planes.

Several big bombs fell in central London, but most report told of demolition of houses in the suburbs and forays by German planes over northeastern and southwestern England and Wales.

Mystery Planes Used

[Mysterious new "Nighthawk" fighter planes, said to be superior to anything Germany possesses, early today beat German raiders back from the sky over central London, the United Press reported.

[The Daily Mail predicted the new planes would go far toward breaking the siege of London.

[British quarters boasted that the new fighters—soon to be operating in daytime—and other new type defense planes will not only crush the assaults on Britain but will carry the war back across the Channel to the European Continent.]

Mass Raids in Day

The conflict in the darkness followed up mass daylight blows Monday by 600 to 700 planes at southeastern and southwestern England which gave significance to British preparations against a possible "Indian summer" invasion of this embattled isle.

The heavy smashes at the shore points coincided with four daylight attempts on London itself. The British said the first three of these were beaten off, but acknowledged that the fourth inflicted damage and casualties.

The Germans then returned with the darkness to conduct their twenty-fourth consecutive nightly assault on the British capital.

47 Raiders Shot Down

The air ministry announced that 47 German planes had been shot down during Monday and listed 22 British planes as lost, although it said the pilots of 12 were saved.

Hitler's night prowlers thundered toward London through heavy Channel mists reflecting the crimson glow of flames started during a daylight shelling of Calais by British coastal batteries.

The big British guns proved an

Sen. King Offers Bill to Waive Johnson Act; New Bases Discussed

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

Lifting of the Johnson Act prohibitions to permit financial aid to Great Britain is being discussed with favor in official circles, it was learned last night.

As a fresh and highly important step in this country's determination to supply help short of war in Britain's last-ditch struggle with the totalitarian war machines, exemption of that country from the law's provisions forbidding loans to nations in default on their debts to the United States has won support in high Government places.

Planned Debt Cut

The revelation came after Senator King, (Democrat), of Utah, had introduced legislation that would offer Britain a reduction in her American indebtedness, the Johnson Act exemption, and cash loans and at the same time provide for acquisition of British territory for additional United States bases in the Pacific.

While the King measure was not advanced in any circles as an Administration measure, some of its main provisions met with quick favor.

Disinclination to condition the loan and debt concession upon British yielding of base sites or other territory was evidenced. There was manifest unwillingness to create the impression that the United States was forcing concessions from a nation fighting for its life in a cause championed also by this country.

Known To Be Favored

Otherwise, there was approving response to the action of the Utah Senator in bringing to the floor in Congress proposals that are now known to be looked upon sympathetically in the executive branch of the Government.

King's measure would authorize the President to enter into negotiations for acquisition or lease of British island bases in or bordering on the Pacific. The President would be given power to procure the funds required from the Export-Import Bank, or any other Governmental source he might desire, and to extend loans directly to the British government.

The bill proposes that England's war debt to the United States be reduced by an amount equivalent to the reduction in the Italian debt by the act of 1926; that not only the provisions of the Johnson Act,

The War Today

DESPITE TERRIFIC antiaircraft fire, British bombers roar over Berlin for 5 hours and 8 minutes, in the German capital's longest alarm of the war. At least one bomb crashes in mid-Berlin but main attack is centered on military objectives in outskirts.

ROYAL AIR FORCE bombers set afire Nazi-operated Fokker airplane works at Amsterdam in wide-ranging assaults from Channel "invasion bases" deep into Germany.

BRITISH USE secret new warplanes to turn back Nazi raiders over London. Germans hurl 600 to 700 planes in six assaults on southern England's "invasion paths." London says enemy lost 47 planes to 22 for British.

Blasting Berlin

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), Oct. 1.—England ruled the air over Berlin for a time last night and early today, tumbling 4,000,000 Berliners out of their beds and into the cellars for five hours and eight minutes for the longest air raid alarm of the war.

The British planes ran into a blast of artillery fire, but crossed and recrossed the city.

The cannon began pounding at them before midnight and thundered briefly at intervals throughout the alarm. At least one bomb crashed in mid-Berlin, however.

Industries Bombed

The raiders apparently concentrated their efforts on the capital's outskirts, where German authorities say most of the city's industry is located.

The British raid also spread over northern and western Germany in the area including the bulk of the country's population and industry.

Authorized German sources said one British squadron ran into a band of Nazi night fighter planes which shot down two Hampton Hereford bombers and one Wellington bomber at an undesignated location.

Two of the crew of one bomber parachuted to safety and were imprisoned. Authorized sources said they were New Zealanders who were on their first flight against the enemy after only four weeks in the Royal Air Force. The Germans quoted the fliers as saying their planes had carried only inflammable leaflets and flares.

Fokker Plant Raked

By the United Press

London, Sept. 30.—The Nazi-operated Fokker airplane works at Amsterdam has been heavily blasted and set on fire by R. A. F. bombers, the Air Ministry reported tonight after a destructive shelling of the German "invasion port" of Calais by British long-range guns.

Waves of British bombers, following up the long-range shelling and a trans-Channel artillery duel, swept upon the French coast and bombarded the emplacements of the Nazi "Big Bertha" guns with heavy bombs whose detonations rocked the English shore.

German anti-aircraft guns threw up a fierce barrage against the British bombers, whose attack began at 9 p. m. with the battered Calais harbor and the "Big Bertha" positions around Cap Gris Nez as the chief targets.

"At times this section of the French coast seemed drenched in

New German Overtures to Russia Hinted

Clearer Definition Of Role in 'New Order' Plans Believed Aim

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 30.—Despite a Nazi press chorus shouting, "All's well with Russia," the impression prevailed in political circles tonight that negotiations between Moscow and Berlin are taking place to define more clearly the Soviet Union's role in Axis plans for a new Europe, Asia and Africa.

With the signs turning toward aggressive Axis diplomacy aimed at both Moscow and Madrid, the usual secrecy closed down around political preparations.

But it seemed evident that either German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop will go to Moscow in the near future or a Russian envoy, perhaps Vyacheslaff Molotff, Soviet premier and foreign commissar, will come to Berlin.

[A sensational announcement may be expected from the Soviet government within a few hours, the newspaper Informaciones reported in Madrid tonight, according to International News Service.

[Quoting its Berlin correspondent, Informaciones declared that German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop was in Moscow (instead of Berlin, as reported) trying to swing

Boy, 10, Mistakes Poison for Water, Dies in Six Hours

The death of a 10-year-old former Kensington, Md., boy, who mistook a barrel of weed poison for a barrel of drinking water, was revealed yesterday.

The boy, Robert James Eisenbeiss, and several friends were attending a football game Saturday at Norfolk.

The boys became thirsty and Robert was the first to drink from the barrel. "Oh," he exclaimed, "it burns. Don't drink it." He went home and a doctor was called, but the child died six hours later.

He was the son of Harry E. Eisenbeiss, an Internal Revenue agent, now of Norfolk.

Latin-American Leaders Start Good-Will Defense Tour Today

Roosevelt Sees Planes, Tanks, Guns in Action On Maryland Trip

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt made a 117-mile tour of major Maryland defense facilities yesterday and saw guns, tanks and mechanized army weapons in action, a plant turning out big bombers for the Army and Navy and a military post where 25,000 fledgling soldiers will train.

Mr. Roosevelt started off at Aberdeen, on the shore of Chesapeake Bay, where the Army tests every type of ordnance. While he watched, a 37-millimeter antitank gun spit out a burst of shells, a Garand semi-automatic rifle spewed bullets at a target, a trench mortar arched some duds into a gray sky, and tanks, scout cars and motorized artillery careened over a stretch of rough ground.

Afterward, he told reporters that some of the things he had seen already were in production, and that new models were ready for manufacture. And, he said, standardization had been attained for many models so that speed would not be lost, as happened in the World War, by changes in design after contracts were let.

Near Baltimore, at the plant of the Martin company, which is producing a new type of naval flying boat, the President saw planes on the assembly lines.

The company, he was informed, has $225,000,000 in unfilled plane orders and expects additional contracts approaching $175,000,000.

Stopping by Fort Meade on the way back to the Capital, Mr. Roosevelt saw a crew of carpenters putting together new barracks at a post which will serve as the receiving center for recruits in the Third Corps Area.

To Meet President, U. S. Army Chiefs Before Air Trip

Commanders of six Latin-American armies meet here today with President Roosevelt and American military chiefs, opening a "good-will" tour of the United States designed to strengthen hemisphere defense plans.

The group of ranking South and Central American officers, 20 in all, will be greeted with full military pomp and ceremony, wined and dined by United States Army chieftains and then be taken on a flying trip of key American defense points.

Gen. George C. Marshall, American chief of staff, said no formal conferences were scheduled on hemisphere defense problems, but added he supposed informal discussions on specific points arising during the tour would be held.

High Officials Here

In addition to the commanding officers there are high ranking officials of three other countries. The visitors include:

Gen. Felipe Rivera, chief of staff, and Lieut. Col. Victor Acosta, of Bolivia.

Gen. Louis M. Castaneda, chief of staff; Lieut. Col. Ernesto Buenaventura, chief of Air Corps; Lieut. Col. German Ocampo, superintendent of the military academy, and Maj. Hernando Mora, Colombia.

Col. Manuel Rodriquez Torra, deputy chief of staff, and Col. Guillermo Guardia Mora, military secretary to the President, Costa Rica.

Lieut. Col. Antonio Leyba Pou, training commander, and Maj. Frank Felix Miranda, chief of Air Corps, Dominican Republic.

Spain Pressed To Aid Attack On Gibraltar

Mussolini Confers With Serrano Suner In Rome Today

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 30.—Plans for Spain's aid in an Axis attempt to seize Gibraltar, possibly to be followed by occupation of French Morocco, are expected in political circles to be completed when Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish minister of government, confers with Premier Mussolini tomorrow.

Serrano Suner is due here tomorrow morning from Germany where, the authoritative editor Virginio Gayda reported, plans of the three powers were "unified" in talks whose military character was indicated by the participation of Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, Nazi chief of staff.

Germany was generally believed in foreign circles to have sought permission to use Spain, which borders on German-occupied France, as a base for Nazi troops and Italian warplanes.

Whether Generalissimo Franco will enter a formal alliance with the Axis powers remains problematical.

Gayda, writing in Il Giornale d'Italia, said Spain had been "geared more directly" to Axis policy in recent conferences in Germany. He spoke also, however, of international

Col. F. C. Harrington, Work Projects Administrator, Dies

Stricken on Visit To Brother-in-Law In New London, Conn.

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., Sept. 30.—Col. F. C. Harrington, national commissioner of the Work Projects Administration, died tonight at a hospital here where he underwent an operation a week ago.

Col. Harrington was stricken ill while visiting at the summer home of his brother-in-law, William Rayburn, and entered the hospital about two weeks ago. Physicians said he was suffering from an intestinal obstruction.

He apparently was recovering following the operation, but complications developed and his condition became critical last night.

His two children, William Harrington, a student at Yale, and Miss Eleanor Harrington, were at the bedside. Harry Hopkins, former Secretary of Commerce, a close personal friend of Harrington, and Howard Hunter, the deputy WPA commissioner, also came here when they learned of the seriousness of his condition.

Col. Harrington, 53, was a strapping, 170-pound officer who spent years in the Army before entering the Federal relief set-up.

Born in Bristol, Va., he was graduated from West Point in 1909, being No. 2 man in his class. During the World War, he served as an instructor of Engineers, and afterward was graduated from the French School of War Tactics, at Paris.

In 1935, Harrington was "loaned" to the Works Progress Administration, in which he served for a time as assistant administrator.

Ruhland to Offer Revised Bill For Premarital Blood Tests

A revised bill providing for premarital blood tests in the District will be submitted to the Commissioners for approval today, Health Officer George C. Ruhland announced last night.

Dr. Ruhland said a new draft of the much-discussed measure was being prepared by members of his staff and he expected to have it on his desk this morning.

He declined to discuss provisions of the revised legislation until he has had an opportunity to study the final draft. He added, however, that little time would be lost in sending it to the Commissioners and indicated every effort would be made in pressing the matter before Congress.

The original health department bill, requiring all applicants for marriage licenses in the District to submit to syphilis-diagnostic tests, was sent to Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee more than a year ago, Dr. Ruhland said, but no further action was taken.

However, the Board of Trade yesterday contended the only proposed blood-test legislation was prepared by a subcommittee of its public health committee and submitted to Congress in April, 1938, and was referred to Dr. Ruhland for a report.

"So far as we know," said the Board of Trade statement, "this matter is now approximately in the same position as it was at that time flames," reported the authoritative Press Association.

British artillery planted on the Dover coast and "Big Berthas" 22 miles away duelled across the Channel during the day with the British gunners apparently scoring direct hits on Calais, where a great fire leaped from harbor works.

[International News Service reported that the Germans were using huge 300-millimeter guns from the French Maginot Line to shell British coastal areas. Shell fuses stamped with a French manufacturer's name were picked up by Britons after a recent bombardment, it was said. The fuses were dated 1939.]

First Fokker Attack

The bombing of the Fokker works at Amsterdam apparently was the first time that the British had struck at this objective, one of the world's largest aircraft plants which formerly supplied war and commercial planes to 30 nations.

When the war broke out the Fokker works held the European rights to manufacture and sale of several famous American types of bombers and fighters, including Douglas bombers.

Since the fall of Holland the Germans have taken over operation of the plant.

(A United Press dispatch from Amsterdam quoted German officials as saying that seven persons were killed by British incendiary bombs dropped on the center of the city, but made no mention of the Fokker plant. The German wireless said no military damage was done in the Amsterdam bombing.)

Railroads in Reich Hit

The Amsterdam attack was part of a wide-ranging assault by British bombers, from the Channel "invasion bases", deep into Germany, in which vital railroads of the Reich, airdromes, arms plants and oil supplies were showered with tons of bombs and incendiaries.

A smashing, three-hour attack on the great German oil refinery at Magdeburg was said to have started "fires visible 60 miles away."

Germany's large aluminum plant at Bitterfeld also was bombed in the night attacks, it was said.

The British lost three bombing planes in the attacks, it was admitted, but it was added that two R. A. F. bombers brought down two German bombers in a fight over the North Sea today.

Meanwhile, authoritative British quarters claimed that Britain's bomber strength is growing by leaps and bounds and that the counter-assaults against German objectives will steadily increase in fury.

Describing the bombing of the Fokker plant, the air ministry said: "Fires and explosions were seen to break out among the factory buildings and in the docks lying to the south."

The Fokker works, built by Anthony H. G. Fokker who died in New York in December, 1939, is known as the Nederlansche Vliegtuigenfabrik, N. V., and was famous for several types of speedy fighter planes, long-range bombers, torpedo-carrying seaplanes and reconnaissance aircraft.

British bombers also attacked railroad centers and freight yeards at Ehrang, Mannheim, Soest, Coblenz, Cologne, Osnabruck and Hamm, all of which have been bombed night after night, the air ministry said.

Airdromes Bombed

Airdromes were said to have been bombed at Gifhorn, Dessau, Evere, Aschersleven and Schipol.

During the long-range artillery duel across the Channel from dawn until noon Monday about 14 or 15 rounds were fired at Dover by the Germans but casualties were "surprisingly small," according to a press correspondent watching from the Dover cliffs.

Traffic in Dover was disrupted for 30 minutes. One building was wrecked and a big crater was dug in a roadway, killing one man and injuring others.

The air ministry communique said that a ground haze hampered the British bombers' crews at first in the attack on the Magdeburg refinery, "but later many fires started by incendiary bombs illuminated the target and guided the following aircraft directly to their objective."

agreements "which are not always those of the immediate intervention of new allies, but with concentric aims which are those of total victory in the war and the preparation of a new order in Europe and Africa."

Britain Preparing

(In London, Britain was reported preparing for the possibility of a German-Italian drive on Gibraltar within the next month, coupled with a Nazi "Indian summer" attempt to carry out the threatened invasion of England.

(In Berlin, German sources hinted that, to divide Axis laurels, Rome might be the meeting place for signers of a new treaty as Berlin was for the addition of Japan to the alliance last Friday.)

Germany and Italy, Gayda said, had favored Franco's dream of rebuilding Spain as a world power, while Britain and France had opposed it.

Vichy Regime To Strengthen Martinique

Will Retain Control Of All Possessions, Government Adds

By the United Press

Vichy, France, Sept. 30.—The Petain government today decided to bolster the naval defense of French Martinique in the Caribbean, now under British blockade, and announced that it will retain full military and civil control of all overseas possessions.

An official statement said that Marshal Henri Philippe Petain and his ministers had decided to proceed with elaborate improvements at Fort de France on Martinique for the benefit of French warships based in the Antilles. Bids are being sought for work to start early in 1941, it was said.

Officials said the plan for maritime improvements was prepared early in the war but later was delayed by the military collapse of France and the German occupation.

[The island of Martinique was blockaded by British warships after the French armistice with Germany to prevent transfer of American-built warplanes—still at Fort de France—to Europe and to guard against use of the base against Britain.

British Vessels Warned

[British vessels have been warned to stay outside a 50-mile zone around Madagascar, France's island colony off southeast Africa, colonial ministry surces declared tonight, according to the Associated Press.

[This, they said, was France's reply to a rejected British demand on the Gov. Gen. Leon Cayla, that he align Madagascar with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of French forces fighting with Britain, or be cut off by blockade.]

The announcement that the Petain government intends to maintain full military and civil control over all French colonies and protectorates was in reply to what an official spokesman called "vicious" British propaganda to the effect that Italy is attempting to take over Syria from France.

Reports from Cairo that Italy has demanded air and naval bases in Syria and Lebanon, and control of the civil administration of Syria, were denounced as groundless. Officials likewise denied reports that Italy had demanded delivery of 120 French planes now in Syria to the Italian Dodecanese Island bases.

Italian Demand Denied

"France has received no demands of such a nature from the Italian government," it was stated.

"France is not sacrificing the slightest administrative or military authority in Syria or any other colony or protectorate."

(The news agency Arabe Orient, in a dispatch from Beirut to Cairo last week, reported that the Italian armistice commission in Syria had laid down 11 demands, including the handing over of French naval and air bases in Syria and Lebanon, French planes and a demobilization of a great part of the French forces.)

Air Capt. Charles Emmanuel Brousse, newly appointed press attache of the French Embassy in Washington, left today for Lisbon, en route to New York, by Clipper, accompanied by his American-born wife, the former Catherine Graves of Atlanta and Washington.

Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of the French naval forces fighting with Britain, has been ordered to appear within 10 days before the Second Maritime Tribunal to answer charges of attacking the security of the state and provoking desertion, press dispatches from Toulon reported today.

Argentina Relaxes Pear, Apple Embargo

The Department of Agriculture reported yesterday that the Argentine government had relaxed its embargo and would permit unlimited importations of United States apples and pears up to December 31.

The embargo was put in effect at the opening of the apple and pear export season about a year ago. It was modified last October 7 to permit imports up to December 31, 1939, in an amount equivalent in value to 80 per cent of the imports during the second half of 1938.

British Talk Of Reopening Burma Road

Hull, Lothian Confer; London Discusses Export Restrictions

By the United Press

London, Sept. 30.—Moving toward a decision to reopen the Burma road to China—for the movement of war supplies—Britain tonight was understood to be discussing with the Dominions the possible restriction of Empire exports to Japan.

This subject was believed examined this afternoon at a meeting of the high commissioners of Canada, Ausralia, New Zealand and South Africa.

[Secretary of State Hull and Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador, conferred in Washington yesterday on significant phases of the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo alliance, and there was renewed speculation that the ancient Burma trade route would be reopened to movement of war supplies.

U. S. Attitude Firm

[Secretary Hull said at his press conference there had been no change in this country's opposition to the stoppage. He had declared on July 18 regarding the closing:

["This Government has a legitimate interest the keeping open of arteries of commerce in every part of the world and considers that such action as this, if taken, and such as was taken recently in relation to the Indo-China Railway would constitute unwarranted interpositions of obstacles to world trade."]

The Burma road was closed on Japanese insistence under a temporary agreement which expires October 18. The United States has made known its desire that the road, over which the Chinese Nationalist government received large quantities of war supplies, be reopened. British sentiment agrees with this proposal, particularly in view of the new German-Italian-Japanese military alliance.

Ask Positive Action

The Chinese, taking reopening of the route for granted, now say that this gesture acquires secondary importance. An authorized Chinese source said here today that Japan's alliance with the Axis powers, after the Japanese invasion of Indo-China, requires "positive British action exceeding the unscrambling of the Burma road egg."

Chinese Ambassador Quo Tai-Chi conferred today at the foreign office with Richard Austen Butler, Parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, and reportedly raised the question of British credits for China.

Three other Britons have been indicted and five more are under investigation on similar charges, the agency reported. Names and details of the trials were withheld for "official reasons."

Germans Claim Extraordinary' Damage to Foe

Bombers Cripple Airport at Hastings, Berliners Report

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 30.—"Extraordinary" damage to military targets by waves of German bombers in raids over the length of the British Isles was reported by German sources tonight.

New German dive-bombers, swooping down in a surprise attack on the Hastings Airport, the official German news agency said, destroyed two hangars and pitted the runways so badly they were made useless. The raid caught the British off guard, it declared, so that neither fighter planes nor antiaircraft interfered.

The latest tally of the day's air fighting, according to Nazi reports, showed the British had lost 38 planes and 14 German craft had not returned home. (British reports said 43 German planes had been destroyed and only 16 of Britain's.)

Scottish Ports Hit

German accounts emphasized damage to the London docks and other objectives in southern England, after dusk-to-dawn attacks in which hits were said to have been scored on Aberdeen, Edinburgh and Leith in Scotland and "extraordinarily widespread" fires started in Liverpool warehouses and along the Mersey River waterfront.

The government, meanwhile, authorized parents to send their children away from Berlin and assured Germans their food supply would tide them easily over the winter.

Bread Called Plentiful

A grain harvest olny 2 per cent under the peacetime average assures "the stability of bread rations in Germany for a long time to come," Walter Darre, minister of agriculture, reported.

The food situation in general is satisfactory, Darre reported, with plenty of vegetables and enough fat and meat for current rations to be continued through the winter. Reporting on the previous 24 hours, the high command today He said, however, there would be a pronounced fruit crop failure.

but comparable provisions of the Neutrality Act, such as the denial of credit for munitions buyers, also be suspended as regards Great Britain.

King declared in the Senate that the "attitude of Japan" made it necessary to "protect our interests" in the Far East, and added:

"The time has come when we must do everything possible to aid England in her fight not only for the preservation of Britain but for the preservation of democracy."

Britain Bears Whole Load

While Britain and France together started the war with what was considered ample cash and credits here to finance their war purchases for an estimated two years, the collapse of France and the "freezing" of her funds here has thrown onto Britain the full task of paying for American munitions.

In addition, the failure of her ally forced London to alter drastically her buying program, originally shaped in contemplation of a long-drawn-out struggle. The imminent invasion threat and the hammering at London and other British cities by bombers brought orders to the purchasing mission here to throw aside the former program and "buy, buy, buy, quickly."

Wartime disposable financial resources here of Britain and France and their colonies were placed at $8,440,000,000 by the Federal Reserve Board last year.

No official would venture an estimate last night on what portion of the British supply of credits in this country has been used up in the accelerated purchasing drive. But they pointed out that while Britain thus far has staved off actual invasion she still faces an enormous task, one that will require her greatest efforts and maximum resources over a long period if she is finally to escape complete defeat.

Believed Necessary

In this situation, it was said, the suggestion for suspension of the Johnson Act provisions in her behalf has appealed to many officials here as probably an eventual necessity if the American policy of assistance is to be continued.

Transit Engineers Make E. P. Goucher Their President

Edwin P. Goucher, Capital Transit Co. engineer, has been elected president of the American Transit Engineering Association, it was announced yesterday.

GOUCHER

The association is composed of engineers from transit properties throughout the United States and Canada. Its election was held at the annual convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Goucher has been with the local company since 1919. He has charge of all major track rerouting and replacement jobs for the company.

Fleet Vanguard Returns From Pacific Games

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 30 (AP).—A squadron of approximately 35 naval craft put into San Diego and San Pedro ports today, part of the first of three contingents of Uncle Sam's fighting vessels to return to the mainland from Pacific maneuvers.

RICHARDSON

Arriving were 13 destroyers, 4 submarines and 3 light cruisers. Heavier craft, consisting of approximately 15 battleships and heavy cruisers, headed by the flagship New Mexico, carrying Admiral J. O. Richardson, in command of the fleet, headed for the deeper waters of the San Pedro Harbor.

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Fifteen hundred college men, candidates for the rank of ensign, U. S. Naval Reserve, sailed today aboard the battleships Arkansas, New York and Wyoming for a 30-day cruise as apprentice seamen. Similar cruises are scheduled for October 29 and November 25.

If the bugler "can't get 'em up in the morning" this winter, it may be that the beds are too warm.

The War Department announced yesterday that by November 1 one cotton comforter, besides two blankets, will be available for each Army enlisted man and for the National Guard in Federal service, when quartered in barracks and in permanent and semipermanent camps.

The Senate completed Congressional action yesterday on legislation permitting Government contracts to assign their contracts to banks as security for loans.

The measure, recommended by the Defense Commission and the War and Navy departments, is designed to facilitate borrowing by defense contractors to finance necessary plant expansion and for other purposes.

Hitler Confers With Holland's Nazi Leader

Political Changes Pending, Berlin Hears; Dutch Show Hostility

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 30.—Rumblings of impending changes in Nazi-held Holland echoed in Berlin today with disclosure that Adolf Hitler had held long talks with Anton Mussert, fuehrer of the Dutch Nazis.

The well-posted Dienst Aus Deutschland news service reported Germany "is in no way satisfied with political developments in the Netherlands."

A communique issued in Amsterdam announced that Hitler had received Mussert in the chancellery last week for a series of conferences attended also by Arthur Seyss-Inquart, German high commissioner for the Netherlands; German Commissioner for Special Services Schmidt and two of Mussert's lieutenants, C. van Geelkerkern and M. M. Roost van Tonninger.

Dutch Show Hostility

Since the German occupation, the Dutch have shown repeated signs of hostility, judging from the number of warnings German officials have seen fit to issue—not to hold nationalistic celebrations, not to help the British, not to be disloyal to the Germans.

Dutch unemployed who refuse to work in Germany have been denied the dole. Radio listeners can be fined or imprisoned for two years for tuning in on non-German foreign broadcasts.

Dienst aus Deutschland, which is closely connected with the government, declared that the new political order in Holland was one which recognized the new political revolution of all Europe.

Likened to Norwegian Faction

In this connection, it was recalled that Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goring's newspaper, the National Zeitung of Essen, had compared the Mussert movement in Holland with that of the Vidkun Quisling faction in Norway. A Dutch paper, the Utrecht National Dagblad, reprinted its article.

(It was announced in Oslo last week that King Haakon had been removed as chief of the Norwegian state. Parliament had been abrogated and Quisling named as the sole political leader.)

"Those Dutchmen who are maliciously or unthoughtfully called traitors," Seyss-Inquart declared at The Hague two days ago, "have been very good and worthy representatives of the Netherlands state and freedom with the supreme leadership of the German Reich."

Similarly, Quisling declared September 26 that Norwegian Nationalists no longer could tolerate the charge that they were traitors.

Action Seen on Bill To Curb Agencies

Logan-Walter Measure Sponsors Confident of Success

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The Logan-Walter bill to curb the power of Federal administrative agencies will be acted upon at this session of Congress, it was strongly indicated yesterday.

Bitterly opposed by the Administration, the measure has been hanging fire since its passage by the House last April. Proponents of the legislation have vainly tried to get leadership consent to bring the measure up on the floor, but not until yesterday did they consider they had won their point.

Implications that an understanding had been reached with the leadership were seen in the statement of Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, one of the principal sponsors of the bill, that "the possibility of the Logan-Walter bill not coming up is definitely removed."

Hatch Confident of Action

And Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, another sponsor, declared that "I am confident that action will be had before adjournment, though not before the election." He said he intends to leave today for New Mexico, returning in November.

In any case, it was clear that the bill would not come up in the Senate until after publication of the final report of the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure, which is expected in late October or early November. Consequently, the measure will not be subjected to Senate debate until after the Presidential election.

Proponents of the bill had been threatening to impede all new legislation by means of a virutal filibuster until they were assured that the Logan-Walter bill would be brought up this session. Yesterday they declared they were satisfied the measure would be disposed of before adjournment; and it was evident that adjournment would be deferred until late November at the earliest.

Action Seen Before Christmas

Admitting that chances for terminating the Seventy-sixth Congress at the present time are "out the window," Majority Leader Barkley said yesterday he had hopes of completing all urgent Senate business by Saturday. It was still undecided whether Congress would then recess for three days at a time until after the election, or decide not to meet at all until mid-November. No matter which alternative is decided upon—and the decision probably will be made today—no business will be transacted until the resumption of regular sessions.

And then, other things being equal, the one remaining piece of major legislation to be passed upon before Christmas will be the Logan-Walter bill.

Senator Barkley and other Administration leaders have insisted that the bill not be brought up for consideration at least until completion of the report of the Attorney General's committee, which is headed by Dean Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury. The full committee, consisting of 11 distinguished lawyers, will meet to wind up its work on October 24, in a session expected to last three days or more.

The conference report on the so-called excess profits tax bill, a measure continuing existing sugar quotas, a bill permitting States to set up home defense units, and two appropriation bills—one for civil functions and the other for conscription expenses—are awaiting final action this week.

Political Arena

Philadelphia, Sept. 30 (AP).—The site of a Republican rally Friday night, to be highlighted by a principal address by Wendell L. Willkie, was shifted today from Convention Hall to Shibe Park.

COOKE

City Chairman Jay Cooke said the change was made because a crowd of 60,000 can be accommodated at the park.

Willkie's address, at 9:30 p. m., will be broadcast.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt yesterday warned fellow New Dealers:

"There's too much complacency around here to suit me. It is time to fight."

McNutt issued his warning after returning from a speaking tour in behalf of President Roosevelt's third-term campaign at a luncheon for Gov. Homer Adkins of Arkansas.

He said the "drift" for Mr. Roosevelt was definite but his re-election "should be unanimous."

A resolution urging the States to keep off their ballots political parties advocating forcible overthrow of the Government was passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate.

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Representative Joseph W. Martin, National Republican chairman, asserted today there had been a "tremendous pick-up" of sentiment for Wendell L. Willkie in the last week and declared he understood "that the Democratic campaign is in such a bad way out West that they have to send National Chairman Flynn out there."

Sen. La Follette Backs 3d Term For Roosevelt

'American Way' Has Better Chance Under New Deal, He Says

By the Associated Press

Madison, Wis., Sept. 30.—U. S. Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., announced today he would support President Roosevelt for a third term. La Follette is running for re-election on the Progressive ticket.

"On the record as made by the candidates for President, the American way of life has the better opportunity of working out its destiny in the next four years under the administration of Franklin D. Roosevelt," he said. "I shall vote for him November 5.

"I have searched my mind and heart," Senator La Follette added. "I have not been unmindful of the fact that I sponsored an anti-third term resolution in the days of the false prosperity of President Coolidge. But for myself, choosing between the two Presidential candidates in this critical period, I can come to only one conclusion."

La Follette said he heartily favored the program to rearm the country. He charged Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee, "deliberately" eliminated foreign policy as an issue by taking the same stand as the President.

Three Witnesses Hit Third Term

By the Associated Press

Young B. Smith, dean of Columbia University Law School, told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday that "freedom of nomination and freedom of election" would be destroyed if Presidents were permitted to serve more than two terms.

He testified on a proposed constitutional amendment to limit the President's tenure to a single six-year term.

"A President," he said "with eight years of cumulative power over the disposition of jobs and money, supported by a Nation-wide circulation of controlled Administration publicity, can forestall any other potential candidate in his own party, can control his party's nominating convention and, having brought about his own nomination, can secure his own election through the influence of patronage and the disposition of vast sums to people who have come to look to him for support.

"This might easily result in a political dynasty which conceivably might last indefinitely."

Chairman Burke (Democrat) of Nebraska, of the subcommittee, inserted in the record a statement by Bishop A. W. Leonard of the Methodist Church, Washington area, containing a reference to "the danger of entrenching a Presidential family in the life of a nation for too long a time.

Ignatius M. Wilkinson, dean of Fordham University law school, expressed the opinion that "continuance of our Republican form of Government" required a limitation on the Presidential term, inasmuch as "events have demonstrated that it is no longer safe or possible to rely on tradition and the unwritten limitation which heretofore have been deemed sufficient."

Farley Gives No Blessing To Third Term

He Does Not Mention Roosevelt in Opening New York Convention

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 30.—President Roosevelt's campaign for a third term was touched off in New York tonight without the blessings of James A. Farley, who eight years ago was credited with masterminding the President's drive for the nomination.

"My dear friend, Jim," as the President calls him, sat quietly on the sidelines as the New York Democratic State convention characterized Mr. Roosevelt as the "symbol of democracy" and the "man who typifies to the whole world the kind of free, humane government which dictators despise."

As State Chairman, Farley opened the convention without mentioning Mr. Roosevelt, but Senator Robert F. Wagner, one of the Administration's most powerful supporters in Congress, called for his reelection. Wagner asserted that Mr. Roosevelt had shown foresight in foreign affairs that was "unequaled"—even in his own party.

Assails Willkie

Speaking as permanent chairman of the convention, Wagner said the President had supported a program for "the total defense of America's heritage." He assailed Wendell Willkie as the "special pleader" of utilities.

"Let us be thankful that while the Republican candidate was a special pleader, our President was serving unselfishly the interests of the land we love," he added. "And let us never forget that on this great National defense project, Wendell Willkie was utterly wrong and Franklin D. Roosevelt was everlastingly right."

Presenting Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Farley referred to a long line of New York governors and added that "no man has ever given the State a greater administration than has the present Governor."

"We are fortunate indeed that he is at Albany at the present time," said Farley, State party chairman.

Gov. Lehman called for President Roosevelt's reelection, asserting nothing would please the dictators more than the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt in November.

Farley, who has taken no active part in the political scene since his retirement from the Cabinet, was asked by reporters if he planned to campaign for either the State or national candidates.

"I'm not talking politics today," he replied.

Russia into line with Germany, Italy and Japan.

[It was broadly hinted that Moscow's decision would be in favor of joining the Axis-Japanese alliance.]

Russian sources here said they believed it "quite likely" that Von Ribbentrop, who flew to Moscow for the signing of the Russian-German accord August 23, 1939, might soon be flying there again.

The unanimity with which the German press emphasized a happy state of affairs with neighboring Russia indicated a hint from above to stress this point in view of speculation abroad that relations between Moscow and Berlin are less friendly than they seem.

This line of German comment, pointing out particularly that Russia was informed in advance of the German-Italian-Japanese alliance, followed an editorial in Pravda, Moscow Communist Party newspaper, which German sources elatedly called "the answer to all political tipsters in London, Washington and New York who believed they discovered an anti-Russian note in the pact."

Optimistic on Spain

(Pravada ascribed the new three-power treaty to military cooperation between the United States and Great Britain, predicted further widening of the war and reiterated Russian neutrality.)

German political quarters also attached significance to the visit to Rome of Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish minister of government who left Munich today for the Italian capital after a long series of conversations in Germany.

These sources pointed out that Rome might be the place for bringing Spain into the Axis alliance as Berlin was for Japan's entrance.

Mystery Plane Repels Germans

accurate adjunct to Britain's Nighthawk aerial offense, which reported smashing blows last night at a German-commandeered Fokker airplane plant near Amsterdam, invasion ports and rail communications, airdromes, oil plants and an aluminum factory deep in Germany.

Play-By-Play Account

Using prize ring terminology, the air ministry gave this play-by-play on the day's fighting over Britain:

"The enemy opened with a right toward London about 9:15 a. m. And another stab in the same direction followed about an hour later.

"Both largely were feints, probably to wear out our fighters. In neither case was the attempt to reach London a success.

"Next came a left toward the west country which was a tentative jab rather than a full-hearted blow. In this raid some 70 bombers and fighters crossed the coast between St. Albans and Portland, spreading fanwise over Dorset and Somerset.

Bombs at Tea Time

"About noon a new blow was struck with some 180 to 200 planes, though the main body of 120 German craft reached no farther than a line of North Downs, although a few got through to London where dogfights ensued over the center of the city.

"At tea time another 200 to 300 came over but only a few got through to London, where some bombs were dropped."

It was just about a half hour later that the Germans struck out with what the air ministry described as their "left jab" toward Portland and Bristol.

Throughout the afternoon until nightfall squadrons of Spitfires and Hurricanes battled scattered groups of Messerschmitts and Dorniers all along the coast, and in many cases were reported to have pursued the raiders all the way back to France.

Meet "Bridal Arch"

German raiders reaching central London during the night had to roar through a "bridal arch" of searchlight beams while hundreds of shells burst in brilliant display along their path.

Again and again they twisted and turned. Sometimes they found the barrage too hot, turned and made off in a hurry.

A few bombs dropped in central London, but most of the activity was confined to the suburbs.

German planes were reported over several areas, including Liverpool, where big fires were started last night, and Wales.

British Begin Gun Duel

The day's fighting was enlivened with a spirited, British-initiated duel between big guns across the Channel.

Late reports from Dover tonight said fires believed to have been started at Calais by the British shelling cast a brilliant rainbow hue over the straits at sunset. Buildings on the French water front could be picked out easily with the naked eye from the English coast.

When darkness settled large, low-flying clouds, portending stormy weather for any immediate invasion attempt, were driven across the sky before a chilly northeast wind.

German shore batteries on the French side, countering the British shelling, killed one man and injured many during a heavy, hour and a half bombardment of Dover.

Tonight's first raiders over London followed the Luftwaffe's usual custom of spraying oil bombs in western London in an attempt to illuminate targets for later waves of bombers. Firemen quickly tackled the fires before they spread.

The Germans, using an air version of time-worn ground cavalry tactics, sent over swarms of fighters during the day in an effort to clear the way for their bigger and slower bombers.

Tactic Fails, Say British

This new effort, neutral air attaches said, has been used with increasing frequency in the past few days in an attempt to offset the failure of night raiders to hit military targets consistently.

A secondary objective, it was explained, is to force the R. A. F. to "pack" London and the southeastern areas with fighter planes at the expense of the industrial centers in the Midlands and Wales.

British military commentators expressed belief these tactics have failed and asserted that the R. A. F. now was in a better position than before the start of the aerial siege of London, September 7.

War Costs Double

Britons learned meanwhile that the war, described as "hardly begun," had cost them three times as much during the first half of the fiscal year 1940-41 as for the corresponding period of 1939-40.

The exchequer announced ordinary expenditures for the half year at £1,610,135,776 (about $6,440,000,000) against £562,026,216 (about $2,248,000,000) for the first half of the last fiscal year. The British fiscal year begins April 1.

Ordinary expenditure for the half year was £452,518,411 (about $1,810,000), leaving a deficit of £1,157,617,365 (about $4,630,000,000).

That Britain is in for a long struggle was emphasized by Capt. H. F. C. Crookshank, financial secretary to the treasury, who urged the public to "save to the limit" to finance armaments for the big battles to come.

20 Misses to Each Hit

A check of bomb damage to railroads in the London area indicated that the Nazis had made about 20 misses to every hit, counting as hits all those bombs which have fallen even alongside the rails.

The British say regular maintenance staffs make repairs quickly, and that few hits cause more than overnight tieups at worst. The London system also permits quick rerouting, the British say.

The second anniversary of the Munich agreement was marked by a broadcast by Prime Minister Churchill to the people of Czecho-Slovakia. He declared that the battle for Britain also is "the battle for Czecho-Slovakia" and that restoration of that nation's liberties as one of Britain's "principal war aims."

Gen. Marshall will give a reception following the review at his Fort Myer quarters and will be host at a dinner for the visitors afterward at the Mayflower Hotel.

Senate Passes Bill to Regulate Bund, Communists

A bill requiring registration of political organizations "subject to foreign control" was unanimously passed by the Senate yesterday.

Said to be aimed at the German-American Bund and the Communist Party, the measure has already been passed by the House, but was returned there yesterday for action on Senate amendments.

The registration requirement extends to foreign-controlled organizations that engage in political or "civilian military" activity, and to all organizations that engage in both political and "civilian military" activity, as well as to all organizations that aim at the establishment or overthrow of a government by force.

These organizations must register the names of their officers and contributors and must file a copy of each of their publications and description of all their firearms.

Anna Neumeyer Funeral Services To Be Tomorrow

Final rites will be held tomorrow for Miss Anna B. Neumeyer, former elementary school principal here, who died Sunday at her home, 1523 Twenty-second street northwest, following a long illness.

A native and lifelong resident of the District, Miss Neumeyer taught for many years in the public school system and served as principal of the Hubbard and Raymond schools before her retirement about ten years ago. No immediate relatives survive, but she leaves a number of nephews and nieces here.

Servies will be held in St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1727 I street northwest, with burial to follow in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Army Orders Four Tactical Corps Set Up

Five More Units To Speed Training Will Follow Later

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Creation of four hard-hitting tactical corps, part of a far-reaching reorganization designed to speed the training of the expanding Army, was announced yesterday by the War Department.

Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, said that orders will be issued this week for establishment of the four new corps, and that five more will be set up during coming months. They will be powerful units of about 60,000 men each.

Two separate chains of command will be established in place of the present single channel, Marshall disclosed. Matters of supply and "house-keeping" will be administered from the War Department, through the present corps area commanders, to local posts. Operations and training matters will go through the new General Headquarters at the Army War College here, through field army and tactical corps commanders, to the divisions and smaller units.

Air Districts Planned

Gen. Marshall said the general reorganization plan had been on paper for some time, but had not been put into effect because of lack of men, equipment and housing. Another phase of the reorganization, he explained, will be the establishment of air districts under the General Headquarters Air Force, composed of several wings or groups. Air units comparable to land force divisions will be set up by the district for various military missions, he stated.

Each of the new corps is to have about 13,000 miscellaneous troops—heavy artillery, cavalry, etc.—and three or four infantry divisions. The latter will be about 13,000 men if of the Regular Army type or 18,000 if National Guard divisions.

Appointment of the commanders and the make-up of the four corps was announced as follows:

First Corps—Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, with headquarters at Columbia, S. C., the corps to include the Eighth Regular Army Division, Fort Jackson, S. C.; the Ninth Regular Division, Fort Bragg, N. C., and the Thirtieth National Guard Division, Fort Jackson.

Fifth Corps—Maj. Gen. Campbell D. Hodges, headquarters at Camp Beauregard, La., including the Thirty-second, Thirty-seven, Thirty-fourth, and later, the Thirty-eighth National Guard divisions.

Eighth Corps—Maj. Gen. Walter Krueger, with headquarters somewhere in Texas, probably San Antonio, including the Second Regular Army and the Thirty-sixth and Forty-fifth National Guard divisions.

Ninth Corps—Maj. Gen. Keyon Joyce, Fort Lewis, Wash., including the Third Regular and the Forty-first National Guard divisions, both stationed at Fort Lewis.

Fourth Corps Follows Soon

In addition, Gen. Marshall said, organization of the Fourth Corps will follow soon, composed of the Fourth Regular Division of Fort Benning, Ga., two divisions at Camp Blanding, Fla., presumably the Thirty-first and Forty-third Guard divisions, and temporarily the Twenty-seventh, of Fort McClellan, Ala.

The chief of staff also disclosed that 7,000 men are to be added to the present garrison at the Panama Canal, which will give it a defense force of about 30,000.

In other defense developments yesterday, the House passed legislation authorizing the creation of "Home Guard" units in the States to replace National Guardsmen called into active service and President Roosevelt asked Congress for $4,450,000 more for defense. The latter included a request for $450,000 for construction at the Naval Academy.

Armistice Board Demands Control Of Syria by Axis

Cairo, Sept. 30 (AP).—Authoritative reports reaching here said that the first demands aiming at Axis control of Syria had been made by an Italian armistice commission at Beirut.

Permission to enter Syria was demanded for Germans and Italians who left Egypt, Iraq, and other Arab countries at the outbreak of the war. Some of these are said to be known propaganda agents, for whose activities complete freedom is reportedly demanded.

Will "The Great Dictator" Be "GWTW" of Comedy?

Chaplin Film Is Having Parallel Career; Of Two National Pre-New York Bookings; Smatterings of Local Theatrical Matters

By Richard L. Coe

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

WILL "THE GREAT DICTATOR" become the "Gone With the Wind" of screen comedies?

Two weeks from tonight this Charlie Chaplin spoofing of the world's most humorless men will open simultaneously at two New York theaters. Like the Civil War romance, "The Great Dictator" has had unique advance interest; more has been surmised of its chances and possibilities than any similar venture. It will make its public bow in the same theaters, the Astor and the Capitol; it will have the same price scale—reserved seats at the Astor with a $2.20 top and a continuous policy at the Capitol with prices from 75 cents to $1.10.

All of which indicates an F street engagement similar to that plotted for "Gone With the Wind." Aside from the fact that it will probably play the Palace, nothing else is decided. Absolutely nothing.

Two million dollars was spent on production over a period of two years; actual shooting began September 9, 1939, and stopped last March 9. Since then three months have been spent in retakes, cutting, editing and scoring. There are 14 principals in the cast, 134 bit players, 2,586 extras and 45 elaborate sets. Its humor will take two hours to project.

Besides Chaplin in a dual role, that of a monosyllabic Jewish barber and a ranting dictator yclept Hynkel, Jack Oakie will play the rival dictator, Napaloni, and Reginald Gardiner, that wallpaper imitator, will be Schulz, Hynkel's aide. Paulette Goddard, Henry Daniell, Emma Dunn. Bernard Gorcey, Billy Gilbert and the late Maurice Moscovich have the other important roles.

Which intelligence makes us wish we could be visiting Cousin Whoozie in Bedlam-on-the-Subway come next Government pay day. This "Gone With the Wind" of custard pie comedies sure 'nuff sounds good.

The British, by the by, are not missing Hitler in their film funmaking, George Formby, whom one used to be able to see most anytime at the Palladium, has made "Let George Do It," which is being released here by the Film Alliance. Top spot of this stirring spectacle is when Formby lands from a balloon in Berlin's Sportspalast, where Der Fuehrer is spooching and pops him in the jaw. Good British humor.

NATIONAL NOTES: E street bill posters have proved as mystifying to passersby as they have been amusing. Thus this elucidation: "Suzanna and the Elders" depicts in a comic vein the communal activities of a cult, many of which were flourishing in the early nineteenth century. This is simply a mythical spot and its inhabitants will include Morris Carnovsky of the Group Theater; Lois Hall, who was with John Barrymore in "My Dear Children;" Haila Stoddard, of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" (and isn't she Mrs. Jack Kirkland, wife of the producer?), and hilip Coolidge, who was the Bund gent in "Margin for Error." It arrives on the 14th.

Set for the week of November 11—sworn to by Claude Greneker of the Shubert office—is the musical version of "Tonight or Never." The score for this one is by Robert Stolz, whose first hit you'll recall whistling was "Two Hearts in Three Quarter Time" and whose most recent score is "Spring Parade," the Deanna Durbin vehicle bound for Keith's. John Lodge, the Senator's acting brother, has his first stage role since Max Reinhart's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the Hollywood Bowl with the British Adele Dixon, H. M.'s Marjorie Gainsworth and Marguerite Namara. Feel better?

Dick Leslie, who made good in one of Gene Ford's early "Going Native" revues at the Capitol, is back in his home town this week in the midst of a career which usually finds him in Hollywood as the voice behind those "Merrie Melody" cartoons. Currently he's offering his mimicry at the Gayety, has some vaudeville dates ahead and hopes to return here before going to the coast in December.

∽∽

INCOMING: "The Howards of Virginia" returns to the Metropolitan this morning after its two weeks at the Earle. . . . Sacha Guitry's "The Story of a Cheat" is revived at the Little tomorrow with the wily Gallic wit as author-actor-director. . . . Tonight's reading of the play at Catholic University's Speech and Drama Department will be Edith Mirick's "Storm," which is set for early production on that provocative group's schedule. . . . This afternoon "Strike Up the Band" will be screened before its Capitol bow Thursday, but its stage revue cofeature puts off reviewing it until Friday morning. (Adv.)

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Sept. 30.

"I Wanted Wings" company is down at March Field doing the bombing sequence. Which reminds me of a letter from Elizabeth Clary, whose son was among the cadets who got their wings at Kelly Field when I was down there, and who writes to say: "I'm so happy you're to be the mother in the picture. I can't tell you how to act the part, but I could tell you about my feelings. Wouldn't it be a grand thing if Paramount, at a special preview, invited the mothers and the families of the boys who graduated down there to be their guests?" Yes, Madame, it would. And I have an idea they'll act on your suggestion.

Ann Sothern returned from New York with a knockout of a new wardrobe and a perfume that takes your breath away. And when I said, "Seems to me I remember that fragrance," she said, "You're right. Alice Brady used it. She promised me a bottle, and passed away before she could send it. While I was in New York I happened into a small shop and by accident found it." And I'll be darned if Ann hasn't sent for a bottle for me.

Miriam Hopkins is crazy about a play the Theater Guild sent her by an unknown Tennessee playwright, which would cast Miriam as a pioneer woman. If they can get together she'll go to New York as soon as she finishes "The Lady With Red Hair."

John Qualen is showing an autographed picture of the Quints, on which they all scrawled their names. If you'll remember, he played their father in their first picture—and at last has lived it down.

∽∽

Grand seeing Esther Ralston again. She's matured so beautifully. Not that she looks older, but she has more poise and assurance, and says, "I was very lucky in silent pictures and even after sound came in. But I didn't really learn to act until a couple of years ago, when I toured the straw hat circuit and had to do a different play each week. Then I've learned so much from radio." She was flown out from New York to play Nora Bayes in "Tin Pan Alley," and I feel this is only a stepping stone into something really important.

One of Bob Hope's funniest cracks at the premiere of "The Westerner" in Fort Worth was, "Gee, if Billy Rose hears about this he'll try to muscle in." Gary Cooper danced his first La Conga down there with a pretty model. Sam Goldwyn hoped to take along Will Rogers' horse, which had been a gift from Amon Carter, but at the last minute Mrs. Rogers just couldn't let it go. She was afraid something might happen. . . When gang returned home Mrs. Goldwyn herself called Gabe Yorke and thanked him personally for the way he had managed the affair.

Peter Lorre was listening to the woes of a prop man who had lost his gal friend on "You'll Find Out" set. "She says I got no tact," explained the propster. "See, I talk straight from the shoulder and she don't like it."

Said Peter, "You should be more diplomatic. Next time you gaze into her eyes, tell her she makes time stand still—not that her face stops a clock."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 30.

IN ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S current hit picture, "Foreign Correspondent," the newspaperman hero mentions a London address at which a rendezvous is to be held. When Hitchcock decided to use that address in the film he thought it was a fictitious one—that there was no such address in all of London . . . A few days ago the famed director received a letter from Lady Melchett, who informed him that the address used in "Foreign Correspondent" was that of her town house in London. That house, she added, no longer exists—for it has been bombed and completely destroyed. "I know you've already contributed a great deal," wrote Lady Melchett, "but will you contribute another ambulance?" . . . Hitchcock presented the ambulance.

THIS IS HOW "Panama Hattie," the new Ethel Merman musical which Buddy de Sylva will produce, came to be written: The producer was in Santa Barbara with his writing collaborator. They suddenly remembered that Miss Merman, appearing in "Du Barry Was a Lady"—in which her hit song was "Katie From Haiti"—had a contract which was to terminate before summer. De Sylva phoned Cole Porter, suggested a show extending the Katie-From-Haiti idea with Ethel portraying Katie, and asked Porter to write the songs. . . . "A Haiti setting won't be practical," Porter advised. "There are only a few whites in Haiti, and you'd have a tough time filling out a chorus line. Why not have a different setting—like Panama, Cuba? . . . "Panama," De Sylva repeated. "That's it. The canal's there, and we could have intrigue and a love story about fortification. That's it. It'll be Panama. Instead of Katie from Haiti, Ethel will be Panama Hattie."

FROM AN UNCENSORED letter which just arrived from Berlin: "Dear Leonard: I've just been through a genuine, unadulterated air raid in Berlin. The Tommies have been here before, but never on such a persistent and big-time scale. The crescendo of bombs and anti-aircraft ground fire, accompanied by the parachute flares and searchlights in action would have done credit to your New York fair. Although it is just about noon the day after the raid, no newspapers have yet carried any comment. We will probably be told by local press and radio that umpty-umpt British planes were brought down, and no damage to any property of military significance was caused. He was presented to her and tried to converse in their native tongue. "Ach," he lamented, "whenever I speak Norwegian—it always comes out Swedish."

How to 'Crash' Movies Is Told By Talent Head

Every Maundy Thursday, and every fifth Sunday after Pentecost, and on the slightest provocation in the interim, somebody blossoms out with that good old favorite, "So you'd like to be a movie actress—well, here's how."

This is because virtually all the young women in the land would like to know how it's done, so the line is always good.

But seldom if ever is there anything constructive about what is said in the way of advice.

So when William Meiklejohn, Paramount talent director, dropped a word of advice to Hollywood-hungry young America, he was tossing off pearls of wisdom.

How It's Done

There are ways of crashing the movies.

"One of the best ways is to understudy a stage star," said Meiklejohn. "Betty Field got her start that way, and so did Leila Ernst, who makes her bow in the Aldrich family film. 'The Aldrich Family in Life With Henry,' just completed by Paramount, and Patricia Morison, now a star in films, understudied Helen Hayes on Broadway as a beginning.

Another Way

"Another method which has proved successful is close contact with your neighborhood theater operator. If a girl or young man has talent and a theater operator who always keeps in close touch with the Hollywood studio supplying his films, finds out about it, he lets the studio know about the girl or boy. That's the way Bette Davis, Ruth Rogers, little Carolyn Lee and a lot of others got to Hollywood."

Meikeljohn pointed out that inexperienced hopefuls and children are not wanted so much in Hollywood now.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 30 (INS).—There has never been any doubt in the minds of those who know Gary, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bing Crosby, that he would eventually follow in his dad's footsteps. The child has a natural talent for acting, and when he appeared in the Black Foxe School plays he knocked everybody dead (if you will pardon my slang). Well, just before Bing went East he promised Herb Polesi that he could have Gary for a movie based on "Miss Minerva and William Greenhill," the famous child book which has been read by millions of youngsters all over the world and has as large a reading public as "Gone With the Wind."

PARSONS

Edna May Oliver would be the perfect Miss Minerva and Polesi is going to offer her the role. In case you wonder why the Crosbys, who always refused to let their children appear in the movies, accepted the Polesi offer, it is because he is such a good friend of theirs and, in addition, coauthored "East Side of Heaven" for Bing and also produced "Swing With Bing."

∽∽

Ann Sheridan and Hal Wallis were in a huddle Saturday to talk over Annie's contract. I have an idea that by the time this is written it will all be adjusted, for she's still working on that same little piece of paper signed four years ago, which makes her pay check less than four figures. In fact, she gets much less than featured players, and since she's tops at the box office there's little doubt but that she'll get that pay boost she deserves. Speaking of Annie, George Brent gave her a gorgeous antique bracelet. Although every time she is questioned she says she is never going to wed, I would be the most surprised person in the world if she doesn't become Mrs. Brent.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: Paulette Goddard is wearing a gorgeous new diamond bracelet; Garbo forgot her shyness long enough to attend a cocktail party at the Jack Warners' on Friday; Judy Garland and Dave Rose are at the Arthur Murray studios practically every day taking tango lessons; Elaine Barrie Barrymore gave the customers at the Beverly Tropics a treat when she walked up with mama and Joey Ray; Hedy Lamarr and John Howard are finding each other extremely good company these evenings. The patrons at the Lamaze gazed with interest when they walked in there the other eve; Irene Coleman and Antonio Moreno have been keeping the telephones busy.

Ann Miller is concentrating on George Montgomery, Twentieth Century-Fox's tall dark and handsome.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

22 Oil Companies Named in Trust Suit

National Defense Program Considered In Action by U. S.

Twenty-two of the Nation's largest oil companies were accused of unlawfully monopolizing the oil industry in a civil antitrust action filed in the District Court by the Department of Justice yesterday.

The suit was filed after weeks of uncertainty over the Government's policy, in which Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, prodded Thurman Arnold, antitrust prosecutor, for action, while the National Defense Advisory Commission counseled delay to avert peril to the defense program.

These viewpoints were compromised in the suit. Attorney General Jackson said it was aimed at "restraints on competition" but that no effort would be made now to compel the oil companies to divest themselves of their pipelines, tank steamer systems and other facilities of transportation and distribution. The suit, nevertheless, charged that these facilities were employed to effect the alleged monopoly.

Bought Law to Divorce Units

Senator Gillette has been sponsoring laws to divorce production, transportation and distribution products.

Besides the 22 "major" companies, the suit named as defendants nearly 300 subsidiary companies and the American Petroleum Institute, 1329 E street northwest. The court was asked to order the institute dissolved for being an unlawful combination in restraint of trade.

Oil companies named defendants were: Atlantic Refining Co., Philadelphia; Barnsdall Oil Co., Tulsa, Okla.; Cities Service Co., New York; Consolidated Oil Corporation, New York; Continental Oil Co., Ponca City, Okla.; Gulf Oil Corporation, Pittsburgh; Mid-Continent Petroleum Corporation, Tulsa, Okla.; Ohio Oil Co., Findlay, Ohio; Phillips Petroleum Co., Bartlesville, Okla.; Pure Oil Co., Chicago; Shell Oil Corporation, New York; Skelly Oil Co., Tulsa, Okla.; Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., New York; Standard Oil Co. of California, San Francisco; Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), Chicago; Standard Oil Co. (Kentucky), Louisville; Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), New York; Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), Cleveland; Sun Oil Co., Philadelphia; the Texas Corporation, New York; Tide Water Associated Oil Co., New York; Union Oil Co. of California, Los Angeles.

Own or Control Bulk of Assets

These companies and their subsidiaries, said the complaint, own or control $9,000,000,000 of the $15,000,000,000 assets of the American petroleum industry.

The "complete integration" of this empire, said the suit, was the culmination of a 25-year trend in the industry, in which the domination of the defendant major companies has been steadily increasing while the position of all others in the industry . . . has been steadily declining."

This integration, the suit said, was accomplished by violations of the Clayton and the Sherman Antitrust Acts, which included conspiracy to fix prices, "posting" prices to drive independent refiners off the market, restricting production of crude oil and refined products, and conspiracy to force independent producers to sell to the big companies whose pipelines are their only route to the markets.

The price in Washington, said the complaint, is "posted" by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

The Department of Justice said in a statement that the action "will eventually present to the Supreme Court for final decision all of the issues with respect to the reasonableness of the present vast combinations in the production, transportation, refining and distribution of petroleum products."

Competition will be restored to the oil industry if the Government wins, the department said, with the result that gasoline, fuel oil, kerosene and lubricants "should be sold at lower prices to the consumer."

Attorney General Jackson told Geelette that although American oil reserves appear good for ten years more, the fact that the extent of the reserves needs to be computed "is an ominous sign for our national defense and for our economic life."

Therefore, Jackson said, he urged Congress to proceed with consideration of measures for oil conservation.

Parking Tickets Fixed for G-Man And Four Police

The law looked out for the law when an FBI agent and several local police officers appeared in Maj. Brown's "Traffic Primer" for the past week published yesterday. The names of three Congressmen and six persons with diplomatic connections also appeared in the list of 90 whose tickets for traffic violations were "fixed."

Erling Landsnaes, of Arlington, Va., was the G-man who explained he was on Government business in a zone restricted for officials. Others given warnings were Detective Sergts. Roy E. Blick and Arthur E. Fredette and Policeman Marie H. Thomas, all of whom said they were on police business. Park Policeman Jack B. Hobbs was tagged for parking overtime.

Representative C. Arthur Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, was issued a warning for parking during restricted hours.

Those pleading diplomatic immunity were C. Fortitch, Yugoslavian Legation; Manuel Boza, 2034 Twentieth street northwest; John Scale, 2721 N street northwest; Manuel de J. Sainz, Cuban Embassy; Paul Yozo Abe, 1807 California street northwest, and Erich B. Lochman, German Embassy.

Spiteful Wives Give Draft Board Lowdown on Men

Women who are invoking the draft to get rid of their menfolk are among hundreds who have written the Joint Army and Navy Selective Service Commission, it was revealed yesterday.

One woman wrote that she was separated from her husband and had been forced onto WPA rolls. "Be sure you get him among the first," she urged. Another wrote:

"The only real reason I could give for exempting him knowing him as I do is just plain indolence . . . I am terribly sorry to do this, but knowing him as I do I must prepare both you and myself."

And another: "I hope if the conscription bill is passed that you'll see to it that the first man called will be — — who is living as man and wife with — —." It was signed "Sorrowfully and sincerely" by his legal mother-in-law.

World War Order Expected To Urge Full Aid to Britain

Strong Stand Predicted In Resolution to Be Adopted By Convention Here Today

The Military Order of the World War, in twentieth annual convention here, was expected today to take a strong stand on American aid to the British.

The resolution, it was learned, will perhaps be more vigorous than one adopted yesterday which virtually asked that a state of National emergency be said officially to exist.

Yesterday's resolution was prepared by a special committee and read by Admiral Willim H. Standley, United States Navy, retired.

The organization, consisting of Army and Navy officers, urged "strongly that immediate action should be taken to give our constituted authorities full power to meet this emergency, to mobilize our national resources (and to utilize our armed services—military, naval and air, in either ocean as may be necessary to assure our national security," the resolution said.

Its preamble held that "conditions in the world today threaten democracy with extinction and these conditions constitute a serious menace to our national ideals and security such as to create a national emergency."

Adjourning in early afternoon, the organization went to Arlington Cemetery, where wreaths simultaneously were placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the graves of four past commanders of the order.

At the Tomb, Lieut. Comdr. Charles A. Mills, of Miami, read a declaration, saying:

"In Paris the sacred flame that marks the spot where their unknown soldier lies has been extinguished by the tramp of German feet. In London, the Cenotaph still stands, amid the crash of bursting bombs. We pray God that this hallowed spot will remain inviolate throughout the years to come."

The past commanders' graves decorated were those of Admiral T. J. Cowie, Maj. Gen. George H. Harries, Maj. Gen. Mark L. Hersey and Admiral William Sims. The Twelfth Infantry participated in the ceremonies.

Throughout the organization the individual members expressed themselves informally as desirous of a strong national defense and sentiment in this direction ran so keenly that a more aggressive resolution calling for heavier help to Britain was forecast for action today.

One member, Capt. A. Simonpietri, of San Juan, Puerto Rico, said the island residents were gratified by the fortifications and military expansion undertaken by the United States.

The people there, he said, were almost solidly behind this Government in its defense program. He mentioned a possibly small, dissenting minority but said it was well under control. Admiral William D. Leahy, Governor of the island, has proved popular there, Capt. Simonpietri said.

Lieut. Col. W. C. Porterfield, U. S. A., retired, of Silver City, N. Mex., who, it was said, is the oldest member of the American Legion, was particularly outspoken yesterday for a strong national defense, calling the times serious and the country unprepared.

Others said they stood solidly back of the resolution and were ready to serve in the armed forces again.

Tribute was paid to 63 members of the order who died during the past year at a memorial held at the Mayflower last night. Against a bakground of grouped flags the Rev. Arlington A. McCallum, haplain of Soldiers' Home and chaplain general of the order, spoke briefly of those who had died.

The Rev. Fred J. Beigs, of Milwaukee, and Lieut. Col. Howard C. Snyder, of Church of the Atonement, also took part in the service. The benediction was offered by the Rev. R. D. Workman, chief of chaplains of the United States Navy. The orchestra of the 260th National Guard Coast Artillery furnished the music.

Problem of Choosing Names Is Triple One

The boy triplets born to Mrs. Richard C. White, of Lanham Heights, Md., Saturday at George Washington University Hospital still were unnamed yesterday and listed on the hospital records as A, B and C.

Mother and sons were all doing well.

Cooperation First

Fears that the so-called "draft-industry" amendment to the Conscription Act might be arbitrarily applied have been further minimized by President Roosevelt's order to the War and Navy Departments.

The President undoubtedly realizes that success of the rearmament program depends upon the voluntary cooperation of industry. So he has added a safeguard not required by the statute to make certain that companies whose plants are needed for production of defense equipment will be fairly treated. His order should thus have the commendable effect of encouraging the investment of private capital in armament plants.

The draft act authorizes the President to take over plants of individuals or companies refusing to produce war supplies at prices deemed to be reasonable by the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy. In other words, those two officials were given power to tell any private manufacturer to accept their terms or have his factory seized. Congress finally accepted that drastic provision to satisfy the politicians who wished to make a show of "drafting" industry as well as men.

There is no reason to believe that, in practice, the War and Navy Departments would abuse this authority. In a democracy, however, it is always unwise to invest public officials with unnecessary powers that may be arbitrarily used. Even in times of emergency safeguards against autocratic dictation by Government officials should be maintained.

To overcome this weakness in the law the President has instructed Secretaries Stimson and Knox to present any mandatory orders which they believe to be essential to the National Defense Commission for review. Under this arrangement there will be a check upon the judgment of the two Cabinet members before any industrial plant is seized.

The Defense Commission will attempt to work out any such disagreements between the two departments and manufacturers on a mutually satisfactory basis. Plants will be taken over only if such negotiations fail to bring about a reasonable compromise. Since the commission is trying earnestly to hasten the production of military equipment by the cooperative method, every industry which finds it difficult to accept the prices or terms offered by the Army and Navy is thus assured of an impartial hearing.

If any manufacturer stubbornly refuses to participate in the rearmament program on reasonable terms, of course, his plant should be taken over for the duration of the emergency. In that case the Government would have to operate such facilities by the most effective means at its command.

It cannot be too often reiterated, however, that the Government is not in a position to operate any large number of the plants from which airplanes, tanks and munitions must be obtained. Wholehearted cooperation of private industry is a first essential to our national security.

Mr. Green Speaks Out

Mr. Westbrook Pegler has rendered yeoman service to organized labor by his vigorous and persistent exposure of union racketeers and racketeering in the United States.

To be sure, his efforts have not always been appreciated by the leaders of labor. Some time ago, for instance, Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, saw fit to write a series of articles warmly denying accusations made by the columnist against George Scalise and other alleged labor racketeers. But Scalise has since been indicted, tried and convicted on charges growing out of his misuse of funds belonging to the union which he headed.

Mr. Green has now wisely come forward and announced that he would ask the executive council of the A. F. of L., which is meeting here today, to take action against "gangster penetration" of affiliated unions. Success in that direction, he indicated, has already been achieved in the so-called Federal labor unions in Chicago and New York.

In those instances the A. F. of L. was in a position to deal directly with the menace. The executive council is now being asked to put strong pressure on the autonomous international unions which happen to be afflicted with the curse of racketeering.

Mr. Green is to be commended for his forthright stand. Responsibility for purging labor ranks of crooks rests, in the first instance, on the unions themselves. What Daniel J. Tobin calls the "miserable, dishonest, unprincipled scoundrels who have . . . brought the blush of shame to our honest membership" undoubtedly constitute only a small proportion of trade union personnel. But the labor movement cannot afford to ignore their existence and their activities or fail to purge them from the ranks of labor without serious consequences to trade unionism.

The Tax Bill

House and Senate conferees have at last reached an agreement on the excess-profits tax bill, and it is expected that the measure will be enacted without further delay.

Working under pressure, with House and Senate bills differing in important respects, the conference committee has evolved a compromise plan bearing the marks of haste and struggle. But it is an improvement upon the House bill in that it gives corporations a choice between measuring taxable excess profits according to a four-year average earnings formula or on the basis of invested capital.

The House bill penalized use of the average earnings formula by levying an additional normal tax of 4.1 per cent upon corporations electing that method of computation. Yielding to Senate objections, these penalties were dropped. But instead there is to be an increase of 3.1 per cent in the normal income tax applicable to all corporations earning over $25,000 per year. Thus a proposal originally intended to be a tax on excess profits becomes a greatly expanded revenue measure.

The conference bill retains a limited penalty for use of the average earnings formula in permitting corporations to count only 95 per cent of their earnings when computing averages. There does not appear to be any logical excuse for this deduction. It is merely a concession to House sentiment.

On the other hand, the conferees agreed to the more liberal Senate provisions allowing an 8 per cent profit exemption for concerns electing to employ the invested capital formula in computing excess profits. Provisions relating to treatment of borrowed capital, improved and simplified in the Senate bill, have also been accepted.

The net result is a bill which raises the normal tax rate for corporations in the higher-earnings groups to 24 per cent and imposes graduated taxes ranging from 25 to 50 per cent upon all excess profits above a flat exemption of $5,000.

In limiting additional normal taxes to corporations earning $25,000 and up, and in graduating excess-profits tax rates in accordance with the absolute amounts of such profits, Congress has made size the test of corporate tax-paying capacity. In principle this method of treating corporate income is open to serious criticism. For in final analysis individual owners of corporations pay these taxes.

It by no means follows that a corporation with large absolute earnings is returning large dividends to its stockholders. The corporation with small earnings may be closely held and may be yielding a very high return to individual investors, whereas a company with large earnings may be apportioning profits among numerous small shareholders.

The effect of the system of graduation and the exemptions allowed is, therefore, to impose a penalty upon size. The disposition to favor small corporations is also manifest in some other provisions.

Leaving considerations of equity aside, however, large corporations are usually better able to stand burdensome tax levies than small ones. And in view of the pressing need for new sources of revenue, tax legislation must increasingly aim at obtaining maximum returns, with decreasing regard for the refinements of theory. Despite their drastic character, the new levies are expected to yield $1,000,000,000 at most in a full year. Compared with the size of anticipated deficits, swollen by defense outlays, that is a very inadequate sum.

The Connally war-tax plan, appended as an amendment to the excess-profits tax bill, and properly deleted in conference, carries rate schedules for corporate and individual incomes that are breath-taking. They serve, however, as a salutary reminder of what may be in store for the country if spending should continue on an extended scale, with or without a declaration of war.

Home Guards

Among the unfinished legislation before Congress is a bill to permit the organization of military units in the States which are soon to be deprived of the services of the National Guard. Failure of that measure to pass would leave many States without protection against internal disorder in a tense and critical period.

At present the National Defense Act forbids the States to replace National Guard units by militia intended solely for local service. That provision was entirely reasonable so long as the National Guard remained available for emergency duty within the States. Now that the Guard is being called into national service an entirely new situation has arisen.

Fortunately, the problem is already on the way to solution. Yesterday the Senate Military Affairs Committee reported out a much revised version of Senator Sheppard's bill permitting the States to organize home guard units. The House Military Affairs Committee has also approved a similar bill.

It is contemplated that the War Department will provide these units with arms and equipment in so far as that can be done without interference with its own military training program. The States may have difficulties of their own in setting up home guards on a temporary basis. But certainly the Federal restrictions against such protective units should be removed.

Spain And The Axis

When the present war broke out in Europe, Spain declared herself a neutral. After Italy's entry into the struggle Spain became a nonbelligerent. Another and perhaps fateful change in her status now impends.

It is not yet clear whether Spain will at once join Germany and Italy in the war. Gen. Franco, to be sure, is enormously in Hitler's and Mussolini's debt. Without their aid, he could never have been victorious in the civil war which raged for more than two and a half years.

That struggle left Spain a shambles. She has not yet recovered from its ravages. Her impoverishment is today so marked, the war weariness of her people so pronounced, the wounds of the conflict so far from being healed, that any large-scale military action by Gen. Franco might easily lead to disastrous consequences for the Nationalist regime. Yet Franco is under tremendous compulsion to do the bidding of his Nazi and Fascist allies.

The problem before him is to find some way whereby Spain can render active assistance to the Axis without immediately becoming fully involved. It is this problem, one may assume, which has been the principal subject of the conversations which Ramon Serrano Suner, Franco's brother-in-law, held recently with Chancellor Hitler and Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop in Berlin and will hold with Count Ciano, the Italian foreign minister, in Rome.

Ideologically, the identification between Spain and the Axis powers is complete. The tripartite alliance recently concluded in Berlin between Germany, Italy and Japan is hailed in Madrid as a great coup and Spain's ultimate adherence to the combination is taken for granted.

The visit of Suner to Berlin, says a correspondent for the official Spanish news agency, "definitely incorporates Spain into this new diplomatic system with which Hitler and Mussolini have gained so many resounding victories." And by aid of this diplomatic combination Spain hopes to get back Gibraltar and to participate in what Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's spokesman in foreign affairs, calls the "rearrangement of Africa."

There remains, however, the fact that Spain is a hungry and shattered land whose plight would become very much worse if the food and raw materials she now gets from the outside world were cut off by the British blockade. That may be why Gayda, in a statement published on the eve of Suner's arrival in Rome, spoke of the "unified plans of the three friendly powers" but also referred cryptically to international agreements "which are not always those of immediate intervention of new allies."

In other words, the moment for Spain's full participation in the present conflict may not yet have arrived, even though the plans for it have been completed. Like Italy, which entered the war on the eve of France's collapse, Spain may have to await the time when British resistance to Germany's aerial assaults has been far more weakened than it appears to be. In the meantime, a progressively more active collaboration between Spain and the Axis powers can be anticipated.

Chiselers In Hollywood

(From The St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

Last winter, it was a group of well-paid baseball players who came into the spotlight as beneficiaries of State unemployment insurance, which they collected under the technically legal claim that they were out of work during the winter. Now, it appears, this nickel-grabbing practice has spread to Hollywood.

Some movie favorites, among them players who get $50,000 each for two or three pictures per year, have found out they can collect $18 a week during their rest periods between films. So they go around to unemployment insurance headquarters and collect the money, Harold Heffernan reports from Hollywood. One of them, identified only as "one of the best-dressed men in the movies," rolls up in his streamlined, chauffeur-driven car every Thursday, gets his $18 and is whisked home again.

It is just such abuses as this that lay social security open to criticism, and may in time do great harm to a humanitarian plan intended for the benefit of low-paid workers. And what of these grasping movie celebrities? What would become of their box-office standing should the film fans learn that their heroes are merely slick-haired chiselers?

Decline Of Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wendell Willkie said in his speech at Coffeeville that London was burning, but that it was not London that was burning but democracy and all it stood for.

How truthfully expressed, for if Hitler and his partners in force, aggression and murder, defeat Britain, there will be an end to democracy in the world. South American nations will surely go Nazi and with the financial chaos that will follow, it is questionable if this country will be able to maintain a democratic form of government alone in a hostile world.

Unfortunately, many of our Senators and Congressmen seem unable to comprehend the tremendous issues at stake and the difference between this and old European wars, but in our grandfathers' time there was no Naziism or other hair-brained forms of government, nor 6,000-mile bombers.

A great many people are also misled by the slogan started in the last war which was "to make the world safe for democracy." Unfortunately, however, the last war was never finished. The German army was left unconquered and what we have today is the result of this.

Wendell Willkie should have added that while democracy burns—America fiddles.

The Needs Of Business

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his Seattle speech, Candidate Willkie stated in effect that business needs more encouragement in order that it may furnish jobs for the unemployed. It is strange that did not happen during the Hoover administration when the Republicans were in full charge of the Government. No New Deal laws were on the statute books. There was every encouragement for business to proceed.

Yet, there occurred the greatest financial collapse in the history of the country. There were more business failures than in any similar period for which there are statistics. More than 5,000 banks failed. Conditions became worse and worse, and unemployment increased. Gloom and despair were on every hand.

It was not until the advent of the Roosevelt Administration, when something was done to correct conditions, that recovery set in. Surely business needs something more than "encouragement."

Our British Market

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently I read that the British government's expenditures were almost six times as large as their revenue or income.

America could help the British by buying some British-made articles. All over the United States, in thousands of department and drug stores, British articles are on sale—cosmetics, linens, leather articles, jams, marmalades, etc.

It would help England to maintain the much needed dollar balance in the United States to buy her war materials here.

America's Future

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: England and France fought a war in 1914-18. They defeated their enemy Germany. They defeated their ally Italy. They severely defeated their ally Russia. They disastrously defeated their ally the United States.

Americans blessed with perception and sense of which way the wind blows can only stand by and hope and pray that the United States will not be defeated as desperately in 1940 as a non-belligerent ally of England as she was in 1917-18 as a fighting ally of that nation.

Favors Immediate Embargo Of Scrap Iron

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt's action in placing a total embargo on all shipments of scrap iron to Japan is a move which has long been overdue, but which is none the less welcome. It is an encouraging indication that the United States is beginning to take a strong stand against Japan's program of aggressive territorial expansion which has been a settled policy of that country for generations.

Japan's behavior in Indo-China, and the present action toward cutting off the war supplies which have been flowing in a steady stream from the United States to Japan, is a vivid reminder of a practically forgotten period when Japan moved into Eastern Siberia at the close of the World War in 1918.

In Russia's exhaustion due to the war, her military collapse, and the revolution, Japan saw another opportunity for aggrandizement. The Japanese not only saw the opportunity for succeeding to Russia's position in Manchuria and Mongolia, but also for bringing all of Siberia, east of Lake Baikal, under Japanese domination. They did everything possible to prevent the establishment of any kind of stable government in Siberia following the Russian collapse, and immediately began acquiring mining, railway, shipping and fishing rights, power plants, flour mills, etc., all over Eastern Siberia. A host of Japanese surveyors swarmed into the maritime provinces and beyond. Subsidized colonization, on a large scale, also took place during this period. In whatever direction the situation developed, this economic penetration and colonization promised to be of enormous strategic value and importance.

The idea of intervention in Eastern Siberia, in 1918, originated with the Japanese. During the last days of the Kerensky regime, they disseminated propaganda in all the Allied nations, pointing out that Japanese intervention in Siberia would save it from falling into the hands of the Germans. Later, Japan made specific proposals to this effect to the United States and the other principal Allies. British and French opinion were inclined to accept the Japanese plan of intervention, but only on condition that the United States would also assent. The United States refused, and it was this refusal that killed the plan for exclusive Japanese intervention.

Japan was not interested in restoring Siberia but was interested only in that portion east of Lake Baikal which, once under her control, she would be able to hold indefinitely.

The United States did not relax her opposition to exclusive intervention by the Japanese, but finally agreed to a plan of joint intervention under which the United States and Japan were each to send 7,000 troops to Siberia. This announcement was made on August 3, 1918. A few days later it was tacitly agreed that Japan might send 12,000 troops instead of the original 7,000. The force dispatched by the United States totaled 7,649 fighting men and officers. With no further word of any kind to the United States, Japan proceeded, within the next few weeks, to send a force of 72,500 troops to Siberia. This was more than all the other forces of the Allied intervention, east and west, combined.

It was Japan's intention to do in Siberia at that time what she later did in Manchuria in 1931. Every harbor and every river in Siberia was dominated by the Japanese. Every bridge and road was guarded by Japanese troops and every railway station flew only the Japanese flag. Nothing moved without Japanese permission.

The situation became so bad that the commanders of the troops of the Western nations made a formal protest, and on November 2, 1918, Secretary of State Lansing told Viscount Ishii, Ambassador to the United States, that Japan had gone too far. Japanese action had produced serious tension. President Wilson, disappointed and displeased with Japan's failure to observe the agreement, made the most vigorous diplomatic protest and authorized the strongest kind of economic pressure.

On November 18, through the War Trade Board, an order was issued stopping the further granting of all licenses for the export of cotton to Japan and the import of silk from that country. Outstanding licenses were not revoked, but would have been had this been found necessary. Iron and steel and their products were considered for such action, but as the feeling seemed to be that Japan would be able to obtain these products elsewhere, cotton and silk were chosen as the commodities that would make the embargo most practically effective.

At that time we were buying from Japan about $15,000,000 worth of silk and were selling that country roughly $13,000,000 worth of cotton per month. This trade was vital to Japan's economy. The action taken by the United States, together with the effect of the collapse of Germany, brought an immediate favorable response from the Japanese. Over 50,000 troops were removed from Siberia by the end of December, 1918. This was so gratifying to the United States that the granting of licenses was shortly restored. In fact, the response to the embargo had been so immediate that the only eventual effect on the trade statistics for cotton and silk was the reduction of silk imports by about one-third during the first three months of 1919.

Though high government officials were entirely unaware of this action until it was brought to their attention recently, this incident provides a perfect precedent for a strong stand in our relations with Japan. Now is a crucial time. Japan now has a formal alliance with Germany and Italy, so to aid Japan is to aid all three. The eventual consequences of present developments to ourselves and to the Chinese, whose continued resistance is one of the most crucial factors in the world today, will be beyond calculation. It is up to us to mark our course and follow it.

Cutting off of vital supplies now (why wait until October 15 to shut off scrap iron) will accomplish four things:

(1) It will neutralize Japan's value to Germany as an ally.

(2) It will greatly limit Japan's ability to carry on her southward expansion.

(3) It will practically eliminate the possibility of effective Japanese operation in the Pacific, even if we should be at war with Japan and her allies.

(4) And it will indirectly give China the assistance she needs in winning her battle for national freedom and liberation.

Every possible consideration commends this move by the President, and recommends even stronger action.

I Pass

DURING TWENTY YEARS of congenial though fairly hectic married life, I have managed to survive any number of passing fads, styles and fancies which have scourged our home. There was Mah Jong, vocal lessons, Yo-Yos, calisthenics, Ouija board, cross-word puzzles, china painting, miniature golf, and just any number of other things. Through all of them I suffered in silence, knowing that they would run their course within a few days or weeks and that life would again resume its normal pattern.

Then came contract bridge. For something like seven lean years I have had ample opportunity to observe afternoon bridge sessions, both in my own home and in that of my friends. Although I know but little about the game, praise Allah, I am an authority upon the technique of these contests.

As I have observed it, the game is played with one deck of cards, a second being always laid upon the table to prove that the hostess is in affluent circumstances and could well afford even a third pack, should she so choose.

Accessories include an automatic bridge table, purchased upon the installment plan, ash trays, lip sticks, eyebrow pencils, powder puffs, nail paint, refreshments ranging from caviar to sardines, depending upon the current state of the budget, and an electric cocktail shaker. And, oh yes, a 15-cent vanity case to be given as "the grand prize" to the lady who is best at figures.

The game always begins in the same manner, regardless of whether the melee is staged in Park avenue or Possum Corner. After all the guests have arrived and have oohed and aahed sufficiently, and have picked out a crow-fly route to the refreshment table, the hostess pairs the guests by some clever and original method of her own, being careful to place at least two deadly enemies at each table.

DECADES ago the ladies played auction bridge, which the more intellectual of them understood passably well, but now everthing is contract and none of them know what it is all about. Happily a knowledge of the game is unnecessary. Sometimes a country cousin crashes the gate and says something about liking the game of auction. Instantly each lady within hearing lifts her eyebrows and exclaims, "Did you ever!" and "How quaint!" and "Wouldn't that just kill you!"

After the cards have been dealt and everyone has whispered her criticisms of the home furnishings and things generally, the actual hostilities begin by bidding. The bidding is a process designed to show the partner just what is in the hand, which is, of course, a most laudable ambition if it were not so complicated by a hodge-podge of subterfuge and bush-beating which would have stumped Blackstone. The contract bridger addles her pretty head trying to learn a set of code signals which would confuse Einstein, but no one is supposed to understand these codes except a few professionals who are smart enough to cover up their own shortcomings by going psychic at times.

The first bidder says "My deah, you just look simply gorgeous today," which being interpreted means, "You frump, how did you ever conceive that color scheme." Then she adds, "I bid one heart," which means something like this, "I don't want it in hearts—I just said that—but I've got the ace of spades and the Jack of Diamonds and a club or two and what have you got?"

The partner replies with a bid of three no-trump, which may mean that she's got everything, or that she doesn't have a card in her hand bigger than a five spot. But why tire ourselves. It goes on like this interminably, while the guests devour tons of food, smoke cartons of cigarettes and drink barrels of whatever is available.

THE GAME is over at last and as friend-husband pulls in at the back door and wends his weary way to the icebox, there to share the plight of Mother Hubbard's dog, "the grand prize" is being awarded in the parlor to the lady with the highest score. This prize-awarding utterly disproves the theory that honesty is the best policy and clinches the old saying that the pen is mightier than the sword.

The ladies flutter around the prize, exclaiming, "Isn't it lovely," which means "Cheap bauble." Then everyone kisses the prize-winner and says, "You lucky thing," meaning, "You mathematical little crook!"

Cases have been known where men have voluntarily taken up contract, and also cases where men have voluntarily sought out the Spanish Inquisition, but instances of both are rare.

Men, on being drafted into contract service, are advised to seek first the divorce courts or to join an Arctic expedition. Failing this there is nothing left to do but sell their business, lay in a supply of shin-guards and ear-muffs and let nature take her course.

"Totalitarian Pact"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial on the "Totalitarian Pact," in The Post of September 28, you reach the wise conclusion that "the sooner the American people adjust their thinking to the ugly realities of our international situation the better will be our chances of averting disaster."

One of these "ugly realities" in the union of Germany, Italy and Japan is that it is directed against the United States. We are warned that our Government had better not be sustained in its policy of aid to Britain. Thus Hitler takes a hand in our election campaign. He tells the American people that the isolation-appeasement policy is best, if we know what is good for us. So what?

I fully expect The Post to follow its own advice and adjust thinking to realities. The advice is excellent.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Triple Alliance And Our Defense

THE OFFICIAL commentaries from Berlin, Rome and Tokyo tell us that under the terms of the alliance the United States must either abandon Great Britain and China or it will be attacked by all three of the totalitarian powers. The alliance, we must observe, runs for 10 years, not merely for the duration of the present wars in Europe and Asia. It follows that the alliance will continue to exist even if we submit to the threat and stand aside and allow Great Britain and China to be destroyed.

We are bound, therefore, to ask ourselves this question: If while Japan is still entangled in China and while the Axis is blockaded in Europe, such threats are launched against us, what kind of ultimatum would the alliance give us if we stood alone in the world? If at this point in the course of events we are told the alliance may make war on us, does anyone suppose that this same alliance, were it victorious, would quietly permit us to build a two-ocean navy and a great air force? Is it not plain as day that if they threaten us with war now if we help their enemies, they will threaten us all the more when they no longer have any enemies? If they think they can forbid us to arm the British and the Chinese, what on earth would prevent them later from forbidding us to arm ourselves.

WE HAVE in this alliance what is in effect an ultimatum that if and when in their judgment our support of Britain and China is sufficient to make a decisive difference, they will strike at us. The Axis would strike, presumably, by means of subversive movements in this hemisphere and Japan would be incited, presumably, to commit an overt act of hostility somewhere in Asia or in the Philippines or in some other of the Pacific islands. The intention would be to paralyze our assistance to Great Britain by engaging our forces in this hemisphere and in the Pacific. Then if Britain fell, this hemisphere would be wide open to attack in the Atlantic, and the ultimatum which now forbids us to arm Britain would become an ultimatum to disarm ourselves.

Not the least significant aspect of the alliance is the fact that Hitler and Mussolini do not choose to regard our existing support of Great Britain, even the transfer of the destroyers, as an act of war. Why? Because they understand better than did many Americans that as long as Britain is fighting, they have everything to lose and nothing to gain by creating a state of war. For, under a state of war they could not attack us as long as they are blockaded in Europe; on the other hand, if they declared us into the war our armament program would at once go from low gear into high gear, and our Government and the other governments of the Western Hemisphere would immediately possess the legal powers to crush and root out the whole underground totalitarian organization here and in the other American nations. They have an obvious interest in keeping our whole defense program at a low level of efficiency and speed. Their policy is, therefore, not to provoke us into a great effort and yet at the same time to slow us down by threats. Their objective is to settle first with Britain and with China, and then under this 10-year alliance, with us.

IF WE UNDERSTAND the situation, we shall make no threats of our own, but we shall without further hesitation transform our defense effort into a full mobilization of the nation's resources. We have talked about "total defense," but we are not getting it or even attempting it. As Mr. Knudsen said in his recent address to the Conference of Mayors, the policy of the present program has been "to superimpose the defense load on the regular business load of the country in order to first take up the slack and then adjust it if necessary." This policy of treating the defense program as something "superimposed" on business and not as the main effort of the nation has been followed in regard to industry and it is being followed in regard to the hours and conditions of labor.

It is the policy of the Administration. It is also the major assumption of Mr. Willkie's campaign argument that he can and will, if elected, provide a normal "recovery" by normal methods. Neither the Administration in its policy nor Mr. Willkie in his speeches seems to have grasped the fact that if we are to have total defense we cannot carry on business as usual either under the methods of the New Deal or under the methods which Mr. Willkie prefers. We cannot carry on business as usual and have total defense. We cannot eat our cake and have it, too. We cannot make an omelet and not break the eggs. The British tried it until the disaster in France, maintaining business as nearly usual as possible, with Mr. Chamberlain and "social reform" as nearly usual as possible to please the Labor Party.

THE QUESTION is whether a democracy can and will arm itself effectively while it is still at peace. For unless this question can be answered in the affirmative, our last hope of remaining at peace will be done. The French could not arm themselves. The British could not do it until at last they stood alone fighting for their lives. Now the question is put to us from Berlin, Rome and Tokyo as to whether we have the lucidity and the courage, the unity of purpose and the patriotic resolution to place the total defense of the nation above all other considerations whatever.

This is the crusade that the occasion calls for and it should be led by both candidates and both parties. For upon our capacity to generate the energy of total defense depends everything else that everybody is talking about: Only if this nation remains independent, beyond the reach of intimidation and dictation, can its liberties be preserved. A nation which loses its independence in the world cannot conceivably preserve its liberties at home. A nation surrounded by a hostile coalition, isolated and powerless, cannot preserve democracy. The acid test, therefore, of any man's understanding of such things as freedom versus dictatorship is not what he says about them, but how thoroughly he proposes to arm the nation, how unreservedly he makes the national defense his main preoccupation.

WE SHALL be greater fools than we can afford to be if we do not at once take measures to speed up the existing defense program and boldly and decisively enlarge it. Deliveries from the existing plants can be speeded up. Lord Beaverbrook has proved that it can be done if the country wants it done and if somebody with ruthless energy is assigned to the task of getting it done. We can find someone to do this if we look for him, and the country should refuse to accept the view that the existing airplane and other munitions industries are working as fast as they could. They can be speeded up if we really make up our minds that they must speed up.

At the same time the whole plan of production should be greatly expanded. Plans should be adopted now, and the work started to make the American production of essential weapons equal to that of all of Europe. This is not beyond our capacity. The industrial capacity of the United States is about half the industrial capacity of the whole world. We should at once make the plans, obtain the appropriations, negotiate the contracts, and institute the industrial training program for an effort on a very much larger scale than our present effort.

TO SPEED up the existing program and to enlarge it, three political measures must be agreed upon. First, Congress must not adjourn, but on the contrary must be put to work on the necessary authorizations and appropriations as soon as they can be planned and estimated. Second, the Advisory Commission must be transformed into an executive authority with a responsible head. Third, the election must be kept in order by the two candidates and by disinterested men in both parties so that it shall not irreparably divide the nation, weaken its position in the world, or prevent a prompt reconciliation and whole-hearted cooperation among public men, once the votes have been counted.

Racket Samples

I JUST THOUGHT I would give you a little chapter and verse on the relationship between the humble working stiff and the arrogant labor skate.

This one comes from San Francisco:

"Some young people I know were penalized $100 for spending their honeymoon at a non-union resort. They had struggled to save for a meager honeymoon. They had a long week-end, and on returning the musicians' union phoned them and demanded $100. They had paid $100 each to join this union and hold their jobs. They had to borrow money for the fine and the money they had saved for a tiny apartment had to be paid to the union."

In Boston the C. I. O. Amalgamated Clothing Workers voted "unanimously" that 5,000 workers must pay a compulsory "contribution to President Roosevelt's campaign fund. The men, $1; the women, 50 cents each. This is Sidney Hillman's union, and Mr. Hillman is one of Mr. Roosevelt's important party workers. Membership in the union is not voluntary, but compulsory. Resolutions which carry by as little as 51 to 49 commonly are made "unanimous" by motion carried by the same vote. In other words, Willkie voters in Hillman's union must contribute their cash to the campaign fund of their political opponent or lose their right to work under rules enforced by Mr. Roosevelt's Labor Relations Board.

AT THE NEW YORK World's Fair 60 ushers and similar employes, drawing from $17 to $35 a week for a season of about 24 weeks, had to join a subsidiary of the George Scalise racket at an initiation fee of $11 each. No increase in wages. No vote. They wanted to refuse, but the racket threatened to picket another attraction owned by the same management. Last year the management paid half of the graft to the racket. As to whether the management paid part of this year's graft my informant doesn't say.

Another from California reports that P. A. Morrin, president of the Iron Workers, governed by three men in St. Louis, suspended the annual convention and now calls conventions every four years. This is convention year, but Morrin refuses to let the California local hold a meeting, and appoint its own delegates. Morrin picked them, so there is no chance for the California local even to propose a new president. Incidentally, Morrin appointed an admitted crook, a renegade Cincinnati cop named Jack Dempsey, international treasurer of this union, although Dempsey still owes a $1,000 fine in the Federal Court in Cincinnati for grafting from bootleggers when he was on the police force. He was not elected by the workers. He was appointed by Morrin.

THIS ONE is from New York:

"I am a retail men's clothing salesman-and manager. Ever since I was compelled to join the union I have been unemployed. I was taken off my last job, secured by myself, with these words from the union secretary: 'This job is not yours. This job belongs to the union. It is up to her to decide who is to work there.'

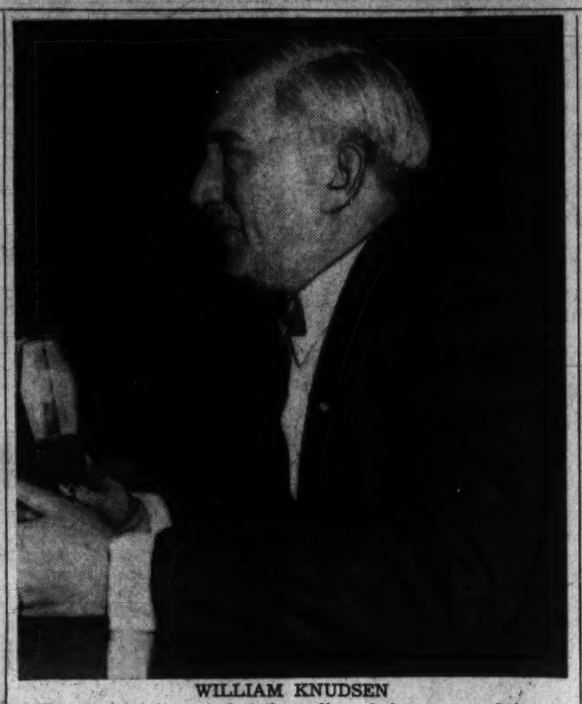
"I was a member in good standing, all paid up. Four dollars per month. Ten dollars each year for assessments and many times a tax as high as $3 per week extra. I have receipts to show.

"When forced to quit my job I couldn't pay. I then got a letter: 'You are summoned to the union office Monday to place yourself in good standing. Failure will automatically suspend you.'"

THIS, ALSO, from New York:

"I am a union carpenter. The building bosses cannot hire the men they want. They have to take most of the men from the delegate. The delegate gives the jobs only to those who pay graft. He admits he gets $10 to $20 from carpenters that made out good. Some of the men work most of the time on specially good jobs. Ninety-five per cent of the men are out of work 40 to 70 per cent of the time. The delegate gets $100 a week pay from the local union."

These are only samples. I have hundreds as bad or worse.



WILLIAM KNUDSEN

His recent statement that the policy of the present defense program has been "to superimpose the defense load on the regular business load of the country" leads Walter Lippmann to point out that such a policy is fraught with grave dangers. Work should be started now, he believes, to make the American production of essential weapons equal to that of all Europe. See Mr. Lippmann's article on this page

Diary Of An Artist

WANDA GAG'S father died (you pronounce the name as if it were spelled Gog) when Wanda was 15. Stella, Thusnelda, Asta, Dehli, Howard and Flavia Gag were younger still. Most of the good folk of New Ulm, Minn., were sure that Wanda should forget about school, stop drawing (which didn't pay) and clerk in the store. Wanda said "No. I have a right to go on drawing. I will not be a clerk. And we will all go through high school." (They did, too.)

It was about that point that Wanda found a half-empty ledger of her father's, and began her first diary. She still keeps a diary, which must be, in its later years, an even more amazing document than in the earlier. But the story of Wanda Gag, as she told it to herself in her diary, from 15 to 24, when she left Minnesota with a National scholarship at the Art Students' League in New York, is amazing enough. She calls it "Growing Pains" (Coward, McCann, $3.75).

You may read it on several planes: as the record of an economic struggle, as the awakening of a girl, as the unfolding of an artist. The Gags were Bohemian Germans, as was most of the population of New Ulm in the 1890's; and they were all artists. The whole family drew after supper every night, upstairs in the Malzimmer; and Wanda was amazed when, at school, she learned that there were people who just could not draw at all. It seemed like a form of blindness, or inability to speak. She always knew she was an artist; her talent was something given to her, whose demands she had no right to deny—and she had a superb, impersonal egotism about it, and a tremendous will. She would seriously argue with herself how much she had a right to use her talent to support her family—her mother died before she came to New York, and even before that this artist-child had been the economic mainstay of the family.

It began at the New Ulm Fair. Wanda got 75 cents in prizes for her drawings that year; Dehli earned 50 cents, and Stell and Tussy, between them, 75 cents for their sewing. The Gags needed it all, and more. The next mainstay was The Junior Journal, a Sunday supplement of a Minneapolis newspaper; it began by paying Wanda a dollar for a drawing, and in two years gave her close to $200. She painted postcards, place cards, Christmas cards, and drew faces on clay pipes, as her father had done before her. Eventually, art lovers in St. Paul and Minneapolis discovered her.

Wanda's tastes began conventionally enough. The early pages of her diary are filled with worship of that "perfect" artist, Harrison Fisher, of the Cosmopolitan Magazine covers; she preferred Raphael to Michelangelo; and in literature she admired "Graustark."

It was a Mr. Doom, teacher of history and civics at the New Ulm High School, who showed the class Perry prints of the Italian painters. He "doesn't look half bad," Wanda told her diary, and she started to draw him—"but by the great sizzling skyrockets he has got his hair cut and I'll have to start right over again." Wanda had a sort of pro-and-con crush on Mr. Doom; then, for some months, Walter Gennert, "tame but somewhat fascinating," occupied her thoughts and led her to sit before the mirror and assay her own appearance. In her school-teaching year there was Phil Becker, an energetic dancer—"I felt as if I had mowed a whole lawn after every waltz with him." But Phil wrote such mushy letters that Wanda confided to her diary, I am thinking seriously of becoming an old maid."

ONE NIGHT during University Week in New Ulm an older man watched Wanda sketching, sat down beside her, and walked home with her, discussing Browning and Carlyle on the way. He told her that Harrison Fisher girls were charming but did not look as if they did much deep thinking, whereupon Wanda, consciously a very deep thinker, gave up Harrison Fisher forever. Soon they were discussing platonic love; this Armand took the idea more seriously than most of Wanda's "cavaliers." Wanda had told her diary that she was becoming cynic; "I have yet to find a boy who is satisfied with a platonic friendship," she had set down. Now she tumbled head-over-heals in love with Armand, who was content to be platonic, and then was agonized to discover that Armand was satisfied to talk to her about Ruskin and Whistler.

"I can't stand it, I say I can't stand it. I can't stand it," she wrote in her diary. The next day she would be "mad with the joy of life." She was very earnest about it: "I maintain that a man's love can be as pure and great as a woman's" she wrote. But the men, except Armand, all wanted to hold hands. Wanda was surprised to discover that, when they did hold hands, she didn't mind the feeling of it at all—only the idea. So she would holds hands a little, and argue the questions, "Can love be eternal?" and "Is love compatible with art?" When Adolph politely asked, on a walk, "May I put an arm around you?" Wanda felt that she could be forgiven for not having resisted. "I don't think anybody but the prunliest, primmest, dried-upset old-maidiest prude would have had the strength and the desire to do so. I might have had the strength, but I certainly didn't have the desire. Besides, I saw no definite reason why I should object."

Federal Diary

Elliott Keeps Post

RICHARD N. ELLIOTT, who has fought enough major battles with New Dealers to entitle him to one of their top ratings for reaction, will remain in command of the General Accounting Office for at least another month.

President Roosevelt, who last July named Lindsay Carter Warren to the post of Comptroller General, has given the North Carolina Congressman another month in which to straighten out his private affairs before starting to operate as the "Treasury's watchdog" for 15 years.

Warren was to have taken the oath of office today. The ceremony will be held November 1 instead.

When Warren returns from Washington, N. C., his home, Elliot will revert to his regular job at Assistant Comptroller General, and the General Accounting Office will find itself in the anomalous position of being headed by a New Deal mainstay whose right-hand man, at least nominally, belongs to the regime of Herbert Hoover.

What portion of the task of running the General Accounting Office Warren will delegate to his assistant, and how much of an influence Elliott will be in determining its policies are questions to be answered after the North Carolinian takes office.

WARREN, before going home last week, refused to commit himself in advance on the course to be taken. "I am not going to have a thing to say until I've had a chance to find out what the job is all about," he declared.

Of one thing New Dealers can be certain. Should the new Comptroller General for any reason in the next two and a half years find it necessary to stay away from the office for any length of time, Elliott by law would become again acting Comptroller General.

Elliott was named to his post December 17, 1931, but because he reaches retirement age before the 15-year term runs out, he will leave office on his seventieth birthday, April 25, 1943. He came to the General Accounting Office after nearly 14 years in the House of Representatives of Indiana's old "burnt district," then the Sixth Congressional, now the Tenth.

How Elliott's old district came to be known as "burnt" no one seems to know for certain. It has had the name since the Civil War, and one story is that it refers to forest fires that burned over the area during a particularly hot Presidential election. Another version concerns a political jollification during which the politicians tossed their plug hats into victory bonfires.

Elliott has clashed memorably with New Dealers on at least three occasions during the more than three years he has functioned as Comptroller General while President Roosevelt withheld selection of a successor to the late John R. McCarl and while Fred H. Brown, former New Hampshire Senator, was ill.

IN MAY, 1938, Elliott recommended that an accounting agency in the Treasury be abolished. Secretary Morgenthau, in the controversy that followed, accused Elliott of trying to "undermine the system of accounting in the Treasury Department" in order that the General Accounting Office might have sufficient grounds for complaint to prove the value of its audits.

Last January, Elliott declared that the Welfare and Recreation Association, operated its Government cafeterias without legal sanction and suggested that its $3,000,000 in assets be taken over by the Government and its properties either be managed by the Government or be let to private bidders.

In a blistering letter, Secretary Ickes said he wondered "if any representations have been made to you by a restaurant association, which for a number of years has been endeavoring to secure contracts in Government buildings."

More recently, Elliott's office reported to Congress on the operation of schools in Government agencies, particularly the Department of Agriculture's Graduate School. Once again the office cited a large-scale Government operation that lacked full sanction from Congress, taking pains on this occasion to show that, in some instances, school authorities believed in changing Government's relation to business.

When Warren moves into the old brick pension building at Fifth and F streets northwest, the House loses one of its ablest leaders. Speaker Bankhead, before his death, summoned him from North Carolina where he had already gone to settle his affairs, to handle the draft bill. After Bankhead's funeral, Speaker Rayburn kept him in Washington until selection of a permanent majority leader.

Warren already has displayed the kind of grit with figures that is likely to be useful when expenditures for defense really begin to pile up. As chairman of the House Committee on Accounts, a post to be taken over by Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, one of his first accomplishments was to get the House restaurant at the Capitol out of the red.

Herbert C. Bonner, Warren's secretary for 16 years, has been elected to succeed his boss.

As Maine Goes . . .

By Mark Sullivan

So, Perhaps, Goes The House

IN THE CONFLICTING interpretations of the Maine vote last month, there may be some one, simple, tangible basis from which worthwhile deduction could be made. Such a basis, it is suggested, might be the Maine vote for Congressmen, that is, for Members of the House of Representatives. (Omitting the vote for Governor and Senator.)

The vote for Congressmen is chosen because it is most likely to be truly representative. With three Congressional districts in Maine, if the Republican candidate in one district had an exceptional personal popularity, that would be apt to be balanced by the personal popularity of the Democratic candidate in another district. The vote for the three Congressmen is apt to average well. The total vote for the three is likely to be truly representative. As this is true of Maine, so is it true of the country as a whole.

WHILE the complete Maine vote is not yet available, so far as this column has been able to find by search in Washington, it seems apparent that in Maine on the 9th of last month, the Republicans cast about 64.3 per cent of the total vote for Members of Congress. (At least that, perhaps slightly more.)

Two years ago the vote cast by the Republicans was 58.8 per cent. That is, the Republicans this year gained at least 5.5 points over two years ago.

So far we are dealing with elections actually held, and figures approximately correct. When we start to use the figures for light on future probabilities, we, of course, pass into an area which includes assumption. Yet we can at least keep the assumptions within narrow and easily understood limits.

THE MEMBERS of Congress from Maine were elected on the 9th of last month. Maine is the only State that elects its Congressmen this early. All the other States will elect their Congressmen next month, November 5. The elections throughout the country will occur within a little more than two months after the election in Maine.

The obvious question is: Can we assume that throughout the country the Republicans will make, on the average, the same gains as in Maine? Assuming that, how many additional Members of the House would the Republicans elect?

Much depends on how the 5.5 points increase is applied throughout the country. If applied literally to every district, the Republicans would gain 72 members. For there are 72 districts in which 5.5 points, added to the Republican vote of 1938, would mean Republican victory. If the Republicans gained 72 members, they would have a material majority in the House.

BUT IS this a correct way to calculate? Probably not. But other ways of calculating arrive at much the same result. There are many ways of applying the 5.5 points increase to the country as a whole and making deductions from the result. Just what is the best way is a thing which only experts in the science of statistics can say, and they would probably differ from each other.

In any event it seems clearly tenable to infer from the Maine result that the Republicans in November will elect a considerable addition to their present membership in the House.

The present composition of the House is:

Democrats	259
Republicans	168
Progressive	2
Farmer-Labor	1
Labor Party	1
Vacancies	4
	435

TO GET a majority of the House, the Republicans would need to elect 50 additional members.

There is one sign, faint yet tangible, of a sentiment in the country favorable to Republican candidates for the House. Of the entire recent Republican membership, 168, all have now gone through their party primaries. All but two were renominated. This would seem to suggest popular satisfaction with the existing Republican membership of the House.

Freighter Nyugat in Baltimore Races Embargo on Japanese Scrap

At Baltimore and other American ports yesterday, vessels loading vital scrap steel for Japan's war machine raced against time to beat the October 16 embargo, but Government experts estimate that only 10 per cent of the Japanese-ordered scrap can be shipped by that time.

After October 16, iron and steel scrap shipments to all countries outside of the Western Hemisphere and Great Britain will be prohibited under a Presidential order.

In 1939 Japan imported the raw materials for one-third of her steel production from the United States. Ninety per cent of this was scrap steel—more than 2,000,000 tons. The remainder was pig iron and finished products.

Last week, Japanese companies, hunting shipping facilities to transport the metal already ordered, chartered new vessels. One such, the Hungarian freighter Nyugat, was chartered by Mitsubishi Sohoji Kaisha, one of Japan's largest importing firms.

At Baltimore, which in July shipped 905 tons of scrap to Japan, the freighter Nyugat loaded metal from freight cars at Curtis Bay, then lifted anchor for Philadelphia to complete her cargo.

Nearby, the Monticello, once the German liner Kaiser Wilhelm II, later converted into an American troop transport during the World War, awaited dismantling by the Boston Iron & Metal Co., which bought the vessel from the Maritime Commission recently.

Once part of the Solomon's Island ghost fleet of retired ships, the Monticello is doomed to shipment to the blast furnace, but whether the furnace is in the United States or Japan is a matter of how fast the liner can be taken apart.

How much the American embargo will impair the Japanese war effort, Commerce Department experts refuse to predict. The Japanese have published no figure on imports and production of iron and steel since 1937.

But the experts believe that the island empire in past years has imported far more American scrap than needed immediately and now possesses a reserve equal to at least her total yearly steel production—estimated between 6,300,000 and 7,055,000 tons—enough to supplant the loss of American products for at least three years.

Gun Fails, but Merchant Keeps Bandit From Cash

William E. Slack, 76-year-old merchant at 1112 North Capitol street, was out to buy a commodity yesterday that his stock doesn't carry. Bullets.

The failure of one to fire from his .32-caliber revolver permitted a bandit to escape from Slack's store yesterday and he was sorry because the place had been robbed enough, he said.

The colored bandit, "a fellow about 6 feet high and with a thin face," had come in and asked for two cigars.

SLACK MEANT BUSINESS, BUT NOT GUN

Slack brought them from the showcase. The bandit started behind the counter.

"I want what's in the cash register," Slack quoted the man as replying.

"I grabbed him in the collar and started pushing him back," the merchant recalled. The bandit struck Slack three times on the head with a revolver. The merchant reached to his own hip pocket and poked his own revolver into the bandit's stomach and pulled the trigger. That was when the bad cartridge just clicked.

"I'll get out, don't shoot," Slack quoted the bandit as saying.

Then the merchant's revolver discharged. But the bandit was running from the place. The merchant found the bullet he had fired lying on the floor. Either there was little force behind it or it had struck something and ricocheted.

Slack said the next such caller would be met with a fresh round.

Commissions Open To Army Draftees

Democratic Policy Will Be Stressed, Gen. Marshall Says

Gen. George C. Marshall, declaring that America's new Army must be democratic, yesterday disclosed plans to give men drafted into the service a chance to qualify for an officer's commission.

The Army chief of staff said that schools would be set up throughout the United States to which draftees or volunteer soldiers showing special promise would be ordered during the last three or four months of their year's military service. Graduates would be commissioned as reserve lieutenants and would have the option of continuing in service.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the War Department has begun to "draft" reserve officers to active duty. Heretofore all reservists called have been volunteers, but officials said that authority granted by Congress some weeks ago is now being used to obtain enough medical officers for the expanding service.

May Affect Other Branches

The authority may be used in other branches, too, it was stated.

Gen. Marshall revealed he had issued orders to all Army field commanders to give special consideration to the maintenance of high morale among the draftees.

"Our Army will be an Army of citizen-soldiers and must be essentially a democratic institution," Marshall added. "In a democracy such as ours, military discipline is attained through the exercise of leadership and mutual cooperation."

Describes Recreation Plans

Describing the Army's plans for providing recreation for the draftees through athletics, movies, and service clubs, Marshall said that close cooperation will be maintained between Army commanders and local civil police and health authorities to "control undesirable elements that may spring up on the outskirts of camps."

Gen. Marshall said that as a "next step" in War Department plans, considerable numbers of reserve officers in the ranks of major and lieutenant colonel may be required for active service. Practically of the reservists now on active duty are captains and lieutenants, as the Regular Army has had a surplus of officers of field grades. The older reservists would be required some time in the future when the present Army in the making is completed and creation of reserve divisions is begun.

Willkie Urges 'Rekindling' of Faith

Clubs in Detroit's Olympia Auditorium.

He said he had a "job" for the women of America. If they would avoid that loss of freedom which has befallen the women of other lands, he urged them to train their children above all in "faith in other people."

If they would help in his "crusade to preserve American democracy," he said he would run out "the nuts and bunk-artists" if elected and install a government run by "men who believe in the American people."

Increasingly through the day Willkie had criticized the men around Mr. Roosevelt, rather than the President himself, and again tonight at Detroit he fired at the New Deal "intelligentsia."

He said it because they have lost faith and do not "trust" the people that they continually seek more power for themselves and declare every problem an "emergency."

Finally, he quoted "The pledge of allegiance to the American flag" and called on every woman to "say with your c h i l d r e n—a n d think—and mean—and live every word of this declaration of American faith."

Leaving his train at Wynadotte, before motoring into Detroit he had addressed 5,000 gathered in Bishop Park.

Praises Vandenberg

There he reiterated his endorsement of the Labor Relations Act, the Wages and Hours Law, and Social Security, but declared these laws of no value unless men have jobs.

At Wynadotte he eulogized Senator Vandenberg, who joined him there.

"There has been no Senator in 25 years with a clearer mind or a more courageous character," he said.

At Cadillac Square, in the center of Detroit, the Willkie procession paused again for another speech.

Here he told the midtown throngs, "We will come through in America if we get back to the art of production. All we have had is conversation. I want to start to work."

As the Willkie train churned out of Indiana and into Michigan, it paused time and again for him to hammer home his attack on the New Deal "Don't change horses" theme.

To large trackside crowds he said he is better equipped than Franklin D. Roosevelt to build the Nation's defenses into a strong fighting arm.

He declared the United States, as did England, "must" change horses.

The "crisis" which this Administration helped to create," he said, was the only leg on which the third term rests.

En Route to Detroit, he elaborated his third term attack to throngs of 6,500 at Niles, Mich.; 10,000 at Kalamazoo, Mich.; 5,000 at Battle Creek; 20,000 at Jackson; 10,000 at Ann Arbor and 5,000 at Wyandotte.

In the early morning at South Bend, Ind., he had journeyed two miles from the train to the University of Notre Dame, to address a group of students and faculty in front of the gold-domed administration building.

Here he gave "thanks that you are here in this university instead of in the shambles of a trench, as millions of young men like you are in various parts of the world."

Presented by the president of the university, the Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, he paid tribute to the university's "athletic prowess," to the late Knute Rockne and to the Rev. Julius Nieulland, who at Notre Dame developed synthetic rubber "which may be the salavation of our civilization."

Above all else he said America must guard against the possibility that "under dictatorship" religion and education will be suppressed and that "institutions like this shall pass from America."

As he sped across the southern tier of Michigan, he pleaded for "open minds" on the election and said he was addressing himself particularly to the Democrats.

A third term, he said, can't be justified on the grounds of domestic performance and the world emergency offered less justification.

One of the largest crowds of the day greeted him at Jackson, Mich., 1854 birthplace of the Republican Party and headquarters of Consumers Power Co., subsidiary of Commonwealth & Southern, with which Willkie was formerly associated.

To more than 20,000 gathered here he referred to his former business associations in the town, and said they know he can "put to work and organize the greatest defense this country has ever had. I know how to do that. That's been my work."

Hopkins.

When a portion of the Government set-up was organized in June, 1939, and WPA was placed under a new Federal works agency, Harrington was continued at the helm of WPA.

Harrington's original appointment to head the agency which dispenses work relief to millions came after a long controversy in which the WPA under Hopkins was assailed and defended.

It was Harrington's boast that he had never voted in his life and that he was completely free from political affiliations. When he took over WPA, he told newsmen that while he might make some changes because "no two people run things alike," he contemplated no "radical" revision of methods.

As for charges of politics in relief, he asserted that WPA money would go to those for whom it was intended regardless of "whether they are Republicans or Democrats."

In a radio "report to the Nation" last March Harrington said "the word 'boondoggle' is being dropped from the American vocabulary as applied to WPA work."

Harrington's two children are his only immediate survivors. His wife, the former Eleanor Closier Rayburn, of Philadelphia, died February 2, 1938. She is buried at West Point.

Bill Proposes Full Pay for U. S. Workers Drafted

A bill proposing that the Federal Government pay its own employes who are conscripted for military service the difference between the soldier pay of $30 a month and civil salaries up to $2,500 was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Michael J. Kennedy (Democrat), of New York.

Representative Kennedy, who plans to issue a statement today explaining the purpose of the bill, offered the measure, his office said, to encourage the Federal Government to set an example for private industry.

The $2,500 limitation is placed on the Federal payment, it was said, on the theory that higher-paid Government workers, if drafted, will be given commissions or moderately well paid jobs.

The Kennedy bill proposes to amend the selective training and service act.

HAY FEVER and ASTHMA

Science has not yet found a preparation which will give relief to all hay fever and asthma sufferers. This is understandable when one realizes that both of these conditions can be caused by many things, such as various pollens from flowers and weeds, perfumes, animal hairs, improper diet, etc. However, science has discovered that many cases of hay fever and asthma get amazing relief from the administration of a certain vital food element. Allersen, a rich source of this important element, gives relief to thousands of sufferers year in and year out. In fact, if Allersen is taken early enough, hay fever and asthma can often be prevented. Allersen is put up in inexpensive, easy-to-take tablets. Trial size, 39c; regular size, $1.00; economy, $2.00.

Exercise, Diet and Cosmetics to Keep All Young, Says Mlle. Rubinstein

By Carolyn Abbott.

IN THE FUTURE—grandmother, mother and daughter will be an indistinguishable age trio. Grandmother will pass for youthful mother, and mother will be as young looking as her daughter. All three will be young in appearance, mentally alert and poised. This is the prediction of Mlle. Manka Rubinstein, coworker and sister of Helena Rubinstein, widely known beauty authority.

"Cosmetics alone will not keep the American woman ageless," said Mlle. Manka. "Proper diet and exercises must be combined with the skillful use of make-up. None are substitutes for the other. Nor are they competitors. Each has a definite part to play in making and keeping a woman beautiful.

Mlle. Manka, who is giving personal consultation and a series of lectures at a local store here this week, says that 20 years ago, she was the first to stress the importance of exercise and diet in this country. At that time only cosmetics were emphasized for beauty. And her theories of diet and exercise were hooted down.

For the Busy Woman

At present Mlle. Manka is very enthusiastic over a group of living exercises that she has just completed. These living exercises, she explained, are created for the busy woman. They are simple exercises that can be performed as a woman rushes to an appointment, bathes, works about the house. For example, there is a breathing exercise of inhaling and exhaling that can be done as she walks along the streets or about the house.

Admittedly past middle age, Mlle. Manka is still beautiful. She has preserved a youthful facial and figure contour. Much of this she attributes to diet and exercise as well as to cosmetics.

Facial exercises, which she thinks have been too long neglected, are as necessary as bodily exercise. Here are a few of her newest facial exercises which will keep the face and throat muscles firm, and the skin unwrinkled.

THROAT AND CHIN EXERCISES:

Stand or sit with the hands clasped behind the back, shoulders straight. Bend the head as far forward as possible, arching the neck. Then slowly tip the head backward, until the chin is high in the air, the throat stretched. Still holding this position, turn the head slowly to the right, then back to the front, and slowly to the left. Complete the exercise by dropping the chin again on the chest.

Stand erect, shoulders back. Push chin as far forward as possible. Hold this position, and move the jaws as if chewing, but drop the lower jaw as far as possible with each movement. With the neck still thrust forward, turn head to the right and repeat chewing movement and then to the left.

The clear cut, youthful contour of Mlle. Manka, Rubinstein beauty expert, belies her age. To other women who would preserve young faces, she advocates facial exercises.

Relax for five counts with head thrown as far back as possible.

FOR A RECEDING CHIN:

Relax completely and very slowly, drop head backward until a slight pull is felt in the muscles just below the chin. Hold for 10 counts, then slowly drop head forward until chin touches chest. Repeat 15 times.

Place the forefinger to top of the head and move head slowly to the right as far as possible. Hold for ten counts and then move head slowly to the left. Hold and repeat.

MOUTH EXERCISES:

The muscle around the mouth resembles a tire, and like a tire, must be kept firm and full, lest it collapse in the manner of a flat tire. In order to lift this muscle, do this exercise as often as you can: Pucker the lips strongly, lifting the upper lip, restore lips to position and repeat.

CHEEK AND CONTOUR EXERCISES:

The muscles of the cheek are mainly nonvoluntary and cannot exercise of themselves; therefore it is necessary to exercise them by bringing the blood to the surface. The blood helps to expand and contract the muscles, keeping them firm and strong.

1. Take a deep breath and hold it for a count of five then blow out the breathy igorously through the nose and mouth at the same time, without puffing the cheeks.

The Facts of Life

She—Well, what do you think of it?

He—Think of what?

She—My new dress.

He—Oh—it's very nice—a very neat looking dress.

She—You don't think it's too dark?

He—Oh no, no! I think dark colors are much better for a woman after she's getting along—.

SHE—GETTING ALONG! What do you mean?

He—Well, you're no longer a flapper are you?

She—I'm not an old lady, either.

He—I didn't say you were. It's just that you want to face facts, don't you?

She—You make me sick!

He—I'm sorry. I won't say another thing?

She—I want to ask you just one question. Do you think this ought to fit a little snugger in the hips?

He—No, no! Not a bit—for a woman of your build.

She—MY BUILD! What do you mean?

He—Well—you're not as slender as you once were.

She—You think I'm FAT!

He—Oh no, no! It's just that you're a little stouter.

She—STOUTER! I only weigh 129¾!

He—Well, of course in a woman it always shows up in the hips more.

She—But the girl who sold me this dress said I had a perfectly wonderful figure.

He—Well you do have a pretty good figure.

She—You really think so?

He—Yes indeed—for a woman of your age.

SHE—MY AGE! You're positively insulting!

He—Well you started this. You asked for facts didn't you?

She—No!

He—I'm sorry. Now don't ask me another question.

She—Just one more thing—would you have this skirt shortened a little bit?

He—I certainly wouldn't!

She—But they're wearing them so short—

He—I know. But you want to be more conservative.

She—Why do I want to be conservative?

He—Well—naturally when a woman's getting a little matronly—

She—MATRONLY!

He—Well, middle aged—

She—I'm not middle aged

He—Say you and I might as well face facts. Anybody past 35 is bound to be middle aged.

She—Well, I don't want to dress that way.

He—You can't fool anybody, and you might as well be yourself.

She—You make me tired. You're always criticising and you say such mean things and—

He—I'm sorry. But you wanted the truth, didn't you?

She—NO!

He—Say! I had a wonderful compliment today!

She—Who from?

He—You'd certainly be surprised. It was from one of the girls at the Rusty Fork—

She—I'm not surprised.

He—What do you mean?

She—Oh, nothing. Go on.

He—Well, today at lunch—there was a bunch of us eating together and we were kidding around with this girl—her name's Mamie, she's a very fine girl, a very sensible girl—and we got to talking about ages and I asked her to tell me the honest truth as to what aged man she'd take me for.

She—I suppose she said 29—

He—Oh no, now that would be foolish. I was serious. I wasn't kidding. I just told her I wanted the truth, and what do you think she said? She said she wouldn't take me for a day over 33!

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

COLLEGE GIRLS who want to Do Things no longer have to wait until after commencement exercises. Many Washington students spent the summer vacation doing work that gave them a preview of what their careers may turn out to be. Among the most unusual of these summer jobs was that of Mary Jackson, daughter of Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, who worked as volunteer interne at the Alderson (W. Va.) women's prison.

Mary Jackson

The job depressed her a bit at first, she admits, but she soon became so interested that she missed the prison when she left. After she had sampled several different chores, the prison authorities discovered she was an "outdoor girl," and put her to work supervising the inmates who tended the superintendent's garden. Mary has been interested in psychology since childhood, prefers Freud to fiction and hopes to find a job in some related field after her graduation from Smith College in 1942.

Officers and crew of the U. S. S. Jacob Jones got the surprise of their life while the destroyer was anchored at the Navy Yard here a week or so ago. Their Sunday newspapers contained an announcement of a meeting of the U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post, American Legion Yeomanettes. Investigation revealed that they are not actually the godfathers of the post; it was named for the original Jacob Jones, which was sunk during the World War. Nonetheless, they thought the ladies might have asked them ashore for a pot of tea.

TODAY'S CAB DRIVER is the middle-aged man who confided to his lady passenger that he'd have to knock off work early that evening. "I'm picking up my girl, who works in a beauty parlor," he explained. "But before I see her I simply must get my nails done. See?" And he offered his hand for her inspection. His nail polish (natural colored) was in as good shape as hers, if not better.

The nurse in a pediatrician's office here had spent a weary day giving advice to worried mothers. The last telephone call was one too many for her patience. "The little boy upstairs just came down and bit my baby in the stomach," the woman said. "What shall I do?" The nurse bit her tongue for a moment but couldn't keep back the obvious retort: "Why don't you go upstairs and spank him?"

REMINISCENCE DEPARTMENT—Frances Benjamin Johnston, the noted architectural photographer, recalls attending a garden party at the White House during the Hoover Administration. A severe storm recently had blown down several trees, leaving large holes which were filled in just before the party took place. Miss Johnston and Mrs. Hoover were deep in a discussion of the beauty of New England elms when the First Lady looked at her queerly and said, "Miss Johnston, do you feel yourself sinking?" They looked down at their feet and discovered they were slowly settling into the earth.

Tailored Bedspreads

Bedspreads are due for a tailored cycle even in fluttery rooms. Printed sateen spreads ensembled with draperies are favorites—so are faille and quilted satin spreads. Speaking of quilting reminds me that trapunto work, that Italian style of quilting made by padding a design outlined with stitching, is coming into high fashion with a leading American fabric house offering it, on special order, in chintz, satin or taffeta in charming designs such as tassels, bow knots, plumes, flowers.

Gloves Grow Longer

Snug - fitting bracelet - length sleeves . . . loose-fitting three-quarter length sleeves . . . just above-the-elbow sleeves—with any and all of these smart dress sleeves a longer glove is the correct thing. And American glove makers have figured out that the 8-button length is the most practical for all these different sleeve styles. That means 8 inches from your wrist up your arm . . . and it's a length that fits over snug sleeves or under loose ones.

FEMALE PAIN

Women who suffer painful, irregular periods with nervous, moody spells due to functional cause should find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound simply marvelous to relieve such distress. Pinkham's Compound is made especially to help such weak, tired women to go smiling thru difficult days. Over 1,000,000 women have reported remarkable benefits. WELL WORTH TRYING! Any druggists.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Given Every Advantage of Good Home, Best Schools, Musical Training, Girl of 17 Scorns and Seeks Social Life in Streets at Night; How Control Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter, just past 17, has taken lately to "pick-up" acquaintances on the street, accepting rides in cars and making dates with boys she meets that way. I know that her moral conduct is above reproach, and she does this just for fun, and to "keep up" with the crowd. But I am afraid of the effect on her reputation; and, also, of more serious consequences that might develop—as I know how one can be led into things.

My daughter has been carefully reared, in a good Christian home, where there was no drinking and smoking, except perhaps a little wine and an occasional cigarette on the rarest occasions. Lately she has developed the habit of smoking almost continuously and of taking a drink when out with some of the crowd, or at parties.

I have never tried to keep her from smoking, although I have tried to show her its ill effects. I thought perhaps if she were allowed to have cigarettes the desire would wear off. Instead, the habit grows worse. It is impossible to get her to keep proper hours, and my work keeps me away from home until almost the dinner hour. Sometimes she comes in at that hour just long enough to tell me she is going out again. If she goes out on a date, or with her crowd, it is anywhere from 12 to 3 o'clock or later when she comes in.

I have tried love, patience, sternness and everything I can think of to get her to see reason. Nothing does the slightest good. She will make any promise, but without the slightest idea of keeping it. She doesn't know that I know of the "pick-up" parties and dates, and I hesitate to mention it. Her behavior is almost wrecking my health and interfering with my work, and it is very necessary that I "keep up," as I have the living to make for both of us.

I have offered her the best school, musical training, a good home with every advantage, and she makes nothing of any of it. She is so untruthful that I never know when I can put the slightest dependence in what she says. Is there any advice you can give me? Or anything you can say through your column that will help? Or, most of all, show her and other young girls the danger of "pick-up" acquaintances and the terrible things that can happen from them? Very truly yours,

CYNTHIA.

Disinterested Authority Must Be Called In

DEAR CYNTHIA: In my opinion, you have a choice of two courses of action in shaping your daughter's conduct to a saner pattern. The one course consists in placing her in a strictly supervised school, and the other consists in bringing her behavior problem to the attention of a specialist in adolescent psychology.

I must tell you frankly that I have discussed the situation (as you have outlined it to me) with several persons, in process of trying to develop suggestions which may save your daugher from the disaster she is surely courting by her latter-day performance. A psychiatrist who does outstanding work with adolescents says her "excessively pleasure seeking behavior shows she is still pretty juvenile," by which he means to say she is acting much more childishly than a normal 17-year-old girl should or does act. He points out that she is "pursuing pleasure and a kind of recognition at the expense of social security," which is to say that she is behaving with childish illogic.

He poses the question of what kind of mother-daughter relationship has existed here since your daughter's earliest childhood. He feels that the problem may involve parental ineptitude as an instigating (and perhaps chronic contributing) factor in the girl's increasingly unmanageable behavior. He wonders why it is that your daughter thinks it necessary to lie to you, and to lead a furtive social life to which you have no clew, except such as comes to you by the grapevine rumor route. Such questions as these must be cleared up, he says, before one can make headway in solving the problem.

I am indebted to a level-headed young man in his early twenties for the information that "pick up dating" is a popular practice among light minded, misguided high school age youngsters in this city. And he was emphatic in saying that girls who let themselves be picked up either have no moral standards to start with, or rapidly relinquish what they have. As he bluntly stated: "When a boy picks up a girl on the street, he means her no good; and the girl well knows it."

Citing several instances of regrettable results because of "boys and girls who should have known better, letting themselves be led astray by a wild crowd," he solemnly urged that your daughter "get away from it all for the next couple of years and try to get hold of herself and a decent, dependable set of values to live by" through enrolling in a "good girls' school."

"I've seen a few girls like this one, plainly heading for ruin," he said, "who were packed off to the right girls' school and came back in a couple or three years completely changed into sensible young ladies."

It is likely your daughter has never known continuous, intelligent supervision and discipline, due to the fact that you had to leave her much to her own devices, or to the care of others while you were "earning the living for both." Thus, the supervision and discipline she would experience in "the right girls' school" might well provide the answer to your truly tragic problem. It is late in the day to try a coercive remedy; but remember, "Better late than never"; and, also, "It's never too late to do better."

But if you haven't the means to send her away to a boarding school you must engage the intermediary offices of a specialist in adolescent psychology. He will talk with her as well as with you, promote a three-way understanding of her behavior problem and guide both of you in finding the mutually satisfactory solution. You can find such a consultant at the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone ADams 1033.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Pompadour Goes Demure in This Bonnet

Both the pompadour and the pompadour hat have many moods this fall. Above they are shown in their demure expression. This style of hair dress is good for the young girl, as it is a combination of the pompadour and the ever popular long bob. The modified roll on top of the head swirls into a long, soft bob which gives a girlish effect. Also a good style for the matron who wants a chin line softened. The perky little bonnet sets far back on the head and flaunts a softly feminine veil

Slim Waist Is Attainable By Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

THE DESIGNERS certainly do not show off their beautiful clothes on lassies who look as wholesome as a bowl of oatmeal! They put them on creatures who are so svelte it doesn't seem likely they eat regularly. But the most noticeable feature of their slimness is the waistline—there doesn't seem to be a waist among them as large as 26 inches!

A model's figure is literally her fortune, and she keeps trimmed down much too fine for the average woman. But that small waist is something to copy! An excess of 4 to 6 inches bundled about the waist doesn't make you any healthier—and it is the ruination of your girlish figure.

The mannequins' rule of "not eating, dessert, ever," would cut the calories enough to take the average waist down a noticeable notch. But for a waist that is enviably trim you will have to exercise. If you halfway do them, today's calisthenics will take half an inch off your waistline in a week. And if you are willing to do a thorough job of exercising, you can stretch it to an inch in a week!

For Quick Results

Stretching, twisting and bending are the exercise movements that get these quick results. Begin with the following stretch and twist:

POSITION: Sit on the floor with the legs straight out and wide apart. Pull up with the midriff muscles and hold the arms straight out at the sides.

MOVEMENT: Twirl at the waist and try to touch the right hand to the left toes, twirl again, and try to touch left hand to right toes. Keep the hips on the floor and the legs still. Repeat 15 times.

Now, flop over on your back and relax before going on with the good work.

POSITION: The same, except that the arms are stretched high overhead.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the spine in a straight line, twist the waist to the left, then bend acutely to the right, slowly lowering the trunk over the outstretched right leg. Straighten up and repeat in the other direction. In bending the trunk, do not let the head thrust forward. It is easier to keep the head up if arms are pressed against the ears. Repeat the exercise ten times, alternating sides.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT.

Make-Up of Coeds

COLLEGE GIRLS in general and coeds in particular are glamour conscious. Lacking the experience for personality glamour, they dab on make-up heavily to achieve it. Often instead of turning into the "oomph" girls they want to be, they spoil half their charm by the wrong choice of cosmetics.

For instance, many a girl fools herself into thinking she is a devastating "knockout" in class when her long fingernails drip vivid red polish and her lips are fiery red. The vivid make-up is just right for proms but not for daytime campus and classroom wear.

Make-up for classes should be at least three tones less vivid than make-up for dances. Nail polish ought to be a refined pale pink or a mild, subtle red. Never wear heavy mascara or eye-shadow in class. Make the eyebrow pencil do the work of dramatizing the eyes with a clean cut brow completely natural looking. Three coats of lip rouge should be blotted until not a trace of rouge adheres to the tissue.

No college professor is impressed with a make-up repair during a lecture; so apply a lasting one. This should begin with a light foundation and a bit of cream rouge (if you don't have enough natural coloring) blended well. Then fluff on a skin-matching powder and smooth over with a brush. Use a small baby brush to apply a mere trace of dry rouge to heighten the cream rouge, put on over the film of powder.

Brighter Prints Now Used for Home Interiors

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE CHINTZ war, in a year of world conflict, would be classed as a minor fracas, and yet it probably affects about as many people as would be involved in a good-sized battle. (But fortunately it's a matter of healthy competition rather than horror). Many leading manufacturers are in the thick of it—the issue being, briefly, whether chintz is "in" or "out." Certain firms say that its day is done and have all but dropped it from their lines, offering instead a galaxy of lovely printed sateens, sail cloths, twills and novelty weaves, and they're selling literally miles of these new fabrics. Other houses stand loyally by chintz for the very good reason that orders are piling in faster than they can fill them. The main difference is that chintz is no longer the whole show.

The basic change in fall fashions in decorative fabrics is in the trend away from heavy somber materials, once synonomous with winter, to the printed fabrics and the simpler, less imposing weaves. This has been gaining gradually until now the fall season rivals spring for interest in slip covers and draperies of fresh informal fabrics. Whereas a few years back every leading store carried a large selection of conventional damasks, tapestries, friezes and such like for fall, now you'll find more limited supplies of these materials while they'll have regular spring stocks of crisp, bright prints, satin serges, novelty textures, new weaves.

Your Arbiter of America's New Fashion Art

Fashion has discovered America! Denied the cues of the French couture, America's fashion creators are spontaneously and splendidly proving their adequacy and refreshing originality.

But take care that you do not mistake mere creative energy as genius. All that is new is not necessarily good.

It is therefore wise to temper patriotism with prudence. Never in fashion history has it been so necessary to depend upon seasoned fashion judgment—an experience guidance that has long been given by the famous Erlebacher label.

Debut Money to Go Toward Cost of Spitfire

Catherine Clement Foregoes Christmas Party And British Air Force Will Benefit; $1,500 Check Sent to Chancellor of Exchequer

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WELL, IT LOOKS AS IF at least one Capital debutante has started something. My telephone has been ringing off the wall ever since I published the piece about Louisa Catherine Adams Clement, and her decision to forego her Christmas ball and give the money to Britain.

"How will the money be used?" "How was it presented?" How could another deb of the season turn over a sizable check to the cause?"

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

These are some sample questions that have been tossed in my direction the last two days. And here are the answers:

Catherine ("Kitty") Clement's money ($1,500) probably will be used toward the purchase of a small pursuit airplane—"Spitfire." For while the check was presented with no strings attached, there was some mention of its being employed for that purpose. Originally, as I told you, Kitty had thought of giving the money for an ambulance, then she wondered if it could do more good in some other direction. Finally she sat down and wrote to the British Ambassador as follows:

"My aunt, Miss Mary Louisa Adams Clement, was to have given a dance for me this Christmas, finishing up my debutante season. Instead, however, I would like to give the money either for an ambulance or toward a "Spitfire." As my aunt wishes to draw the money—£300—from her account with Brown, Shipley, London, she would rather it went through you than an American committee. The check has been given me in blank so that I await your suggestion as to how best to contribute the money before sending it to you."

From Lord Lothian came a note of gratitude and the suggestion that possibly, since many Americans already had made generous offers of ambulances, the money might be used to assist in destroying the enemy's aircraft. He suggested, further, that it be made payable to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

It was. And shortly before she left town to return to her studies at Bryn Mawr, Miss Clement wrote a final note to the Ambassador stating that she was more than glad "that the money will contribute toward buying a 'Spitfire' airplane. May it destroy many of the enemy's aircraft!"

That, then, is the story down to its final detail. Seems to me that any deb bent on sending a similar "bundle" to Britain might follow the same procedure.

James Boyds Come to Capital

Add another to the list of literary notables currently converging on the Capital. James Boyd, author of the best-selling novel, "Drums," has come to town with Mrs. Boyd and plans to be here for an extended stay.

I understand Mr. Boyd was brought here to work with Solicitor General Francis Biddle, and that he will be here most of the winter. Anyway, he and his wife came here several days ago from their home in Southern Pines, N. C., and they are now at the Anchorage. Chances are, they will take a house later.

Since "Drums" made literary history several years ago, a couple of additional novels have come from Mr. Boyd's talented pen. I remember particularly "Marching On" and "Long Hunt." Mrs. Boyd is the former Katherin Lamont, of New York. There are a couple of sons, James, jr., and David Lamont, and one daughter, Nancy, in the Boyd household.

C. B. Dicks To Fly to Texas

Here and there: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barstow Dick (she's the former Anne Child, of Washington) who recently visited the latter's mother, Mrs. E. W. Pavenstedt here, are now in Chestnut Hill, Pa., completing a stay with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Langhorne Dick. Tomorrow, however, they will be off by plane for Texas and soon will begin housekeeping in their new home at Delores, down on the Rio Grande. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Pavenstedt, meanwhile, are moving from Tracy place to 1612 Thirty-fourth place.

Speaking of Texas—as I was a few lines back—there'll be quite a turnout of Lone Star Staters at the Women's National Press Club luncheon today at the Willard Hotel. Honor guest is to be Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, who hails from my home town, Bonham. (Pardon me, I guess I hail from his.) Anyway, all Texans are mighty proud of "Mr. Sam," and a representative number of Washington residents who come from his State will be on hand to see him at the luncheon. The time is 1:30 p. m.

In town for a brief stay is Mrs. D'Arcy McGreer, wife of the Canadian Charge d'Affaires at Tokyo, who is dividing her time between the home of her sister, Mrs. Lester Buchanan, and that of their father, E. Wharton Lester.

The former Kathleen Lester and her husband are widely known here. Until four years ago, when he was transferred to Japan, he was a member of the Canadian Legation here. Mrs. McGreer will go to New York following her Washington visit. She plans to return to Tokyo in November.

Eckhardts See Son, Ensign, Marry Virginia Bell

Dr. and Mrs. John Eckhardt, who have been in Lincoln, N. H., to attend the wedding of their son, will return to Washington the end of this week.

The marriage of Miss Virginia Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bell, of Lincoln, to Ensign John Carl Eckhardt U. S. N., took place on Saturday in Union Church, in Lincoln. Miss May Hickey, of Wakefield, Mass., was maid of honor at the ceremony, and the best man was Ensign Jamie Adair, U. S. N., of Baltimore.

The bride was graduated from Massachusetts General Hospital Training School, and Ensign Eckhardt was graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis in 1938 and is assigned to the U. S. S. Vincennes.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis Return to Capital

The Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and Mrs. Ewin L. Davis returned to Washington last night after spending a few days at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Miss Cauthen To Wed Oct. 19

Miss Florence Cauthen, niece of Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, of Washington, has selected Saturday, October 19, as the date of her wedding to John Boyd Stanley, of this city.

Owing to the recent death of the prospective bridegroom's father, Dr. Arthur Camp Stanley, and his grandmother, Mrs. Kate Willard Boyd, only relative and close friends will be present at the ceremony. The couple will be married at 4:30 at the home of Mrs. Ward, 2400 Massachusetts avenue, the Rev. A. G. W. Pfanko of the Church of the Transfiguration, Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., officiating. A reception will follow.

Miss Cauthen will have as her matron of honor and only attendant Mrs. Charles John Mohan, the former Miss Beverly Moffett, daughter of Mrs. William A. Moffett and the late Rear Admiral Moffet. Camp Stanley will serve as best man for his brother.

Miss Cauthen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burge Cauthen, of Atlanta. She was extensively entertained by her friends before leaving last week to join her aunt here. Mrs. Ward and Miss Cauthen are at the St. Regis Hotel in New York for the remainder of the week.

Realty Transfers Become News As Friends Get Lost by Moving

REAL ESTATE transfers are the main news in local circles at the moment. There is such a tremendous shuttling back and forth that nobody knows any longer where anyone is, and it takes a good 12 hours to track down friends. One couple completely disappeared into a vacuum for a time. They got all their furniture out on the street to move into a remodeled house in Georgetown; found that painters and paperhangers were appearing suddenly out of closets and from under staircases so have retreated to a hotel.

MRS. PETER AUGUSTUS JAY has sold her home to Mrs. Walter Denegre, who in turn has sold hers to somebody else. The Jay house has been occupied for the last two years by the Snowden Fahnestocks, who are still undecided where to go. Harry Villard has bought a house in Georgetown and the Richard Willmers and the Russell Sards have also moved. The James Rowes have shifted from N street to Thirty-fourth.

EVERYBODY'S VIEWS on political and international subjects are running so strong that conversation in the Capital is fraught with peril these days. One hostess insists on games after dinner so people will not have a chance to get bitter over an argument. The other day a leading Democratic officeholder was complaining about being overworked. "Never mind," comforted an innocent bystander, "maybe after elections you can have a nice long rest." "What do you MEAN?" shouted the Democrat suspiciously.

MRS. JESSE JONES, wife of the new Secretary of Commerce, is crocheting her seventeenth black shawl for France. One of the most energetic workers for war relief, she carries her crocheting everywhere, even doing it while motoring. Mrs. Richard Cowell has one of the finest stamp collections in the country, with airplane stamps from every land in the world.

AT FRANCES CARTER'S wedding on Saturday to Charles Sturtevant, everybody gathered in the garden to enjoy one of the last outdoor parties of the al fresco season. Charles Carroll Morgan skillfully balanced three cups of punch in one hand as he made his way down the brick steps to Mrs. Morgan. She was attractive in black with a silver fox cape. Betty Shouse and Cuthbert Train were busy estimating how many wedding guests could be wedged into a given amount of space, in preparation for their own marriage October 26. As both have lived here most of their lives, and are planning only as many guests as the Lawrence Groner house will hold, they are running into difficulties . . Miss Helen Davis, Miss Anne Hallowell, Mrs. James Rowe, who is working as a volunteer at Democratic headquarters; the Thacher Winslows, who moved in from the country, and the Hugh Wises were others present. Mr. Wise recently gave a farewell party for Sherry Davis, who is with the National Guard, and the next day found a notice in the mail saying he has been called for duty too.

A FRIEND recently returned from South America reports that down there they still go right on giving benefits for France even without the certainty that the proceeds will ever reach that unfortunate country. Since South Americans have always regarded Paris as their spiritual home, they are absolutely stricken at its defeat, and are just giving party after party to raise money. At the Plaza Hotel in Buenos Aires there's a weekly tea dance for this purpose.

Poor Flying Weather Cancels Fete for Uruguayan Officers

Even the famous efficiency of the military can't cope with a factor like bad weather. Several South American army officers who were to have been feted here yesterday couldn't make it, because bad weather held up their planes.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was to have given a luncheon for Col. Felipe de la Barra and Lieut. Col. Hosea M. Tamayo. The Military Attache and Senora de Sarmiento also had planned a dinner for the officers, but both affairs were postponed. The hosts hope to entertain for the visitors on their return to the Capital October 14, but every minute of their schedule here this week was already filled.

Today the South Americans will find a round of activities ready for them. The director of the Pan American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, will give a luncheon, and this afternoon Gen. and Mrs. George C. Marshall will entertain at a large reception. Sixty-five guests will attend the men's dinner to be held by the U. S. Chief of Staff tonight at the Mayflower.

The two Uruguayan officers, who arrived on Sunday, were honored at a dinner given that night by their Minister, Dr. Jose Richling.

Early tomorrow the visitors will take off for Langley Field as the first stop on a tour of our defenses. They will return October 14 and will stay two days here. Gen. Sherman Miles, head of Military Intelligence for the Army, has planned a reception in their honor the afternoon of October 14.

Marjorie Sachs And M. C. Redman To Wed Nov. 2

Mrs. George M. Sachs, of New York, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marjorie Jane Sachs, to M. Chandler Redman, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Redman, of Bangor, Me.

Miss Sachs attended the Horace Mann School and was graduated from Smith College in 1938. She also attended the School of Public Affairs of American University. Mr. Redman was graduated in 1934 from Bowdoin College.

The wedding will take place November 2.

R. V. Fleming, Jr. Gives Party For Couple

Madeleine Carter And John L. Smith, Jr., Are Guests of Honor

Guests at the cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Robert V. Fleming, jr., in honor of Madeleine Cotter and John Lewis Smith, jr., circled around one of the prettiest tea tables arranged for a bridal fete this season.

Artist-in-charge was the host's mother, Mrs. Fleming, who received with her son. She had selected an all-white motif to set off the table, and had chosen a centerpiece of white dahlias and roses, flanked by tall white tapers. The item that made the decorations engagingly different, however, was the bows of white ribbon tied on the candles. Practically every one of the 125 guests noticed those pretty bows and commented on them in passing.

The party, an informal fete, getting under way around 5 o'clock, took place in the Fleming home at 2200 Wyoming avenue. Definitely a young people's gathering, the event was one of a number on the calendar for Miss Cotter and Mr. Smith, who will be married Thursday. Members of the wedding party and a number of other friends of the bride-elect and her fiance were among the guests.

This afternoon the group of young men selected as ushers will entertain at a cocktail party at the home of Clarence Dodge. Hosts will include Kent Legg, Malvern Morse and John Hamilton. Still another party on the Cotter-Smith prenuptial calendar is the dinner party to be given tomorrow night by Dr. and Mrs. Robert Coffey, jr.

Mrs. Wilcox Visits Capital

Mrs. Walter D. Wilcox, whose former home on New Hampshire avenue is now the headquarters of the Women's National Democratic Club, arrived in Washington yesterday to spend two weeks with Mrs. J. Upshur Moorhead at her apartment on Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Wilcox has been spending the summer at Bar Harbor with her sister, Mrs. Gist Blair, of Washington, and Mr. Blair. Later this month she will visit Dr. and Mrs. Montgomery Blair at their new home on Kalorama circle and will then join Mr. Wilcox at the Chevy Chase Club for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox will be widely welcomed in Washington. For 25 years their New Hampshire avenue house was the scene of much entertaining and they have a host of friends here.

Mrs. Conness Feted By Mrs. Anderson

Mrs. Larz Anderson has as her guest at her home, Weld, in Brookline, her cousin, Mrs. Leland Conness, of Washington. Mrs. Anderson's palatial home in the Capital is now the headquarters of the Society of the Cincinnati.

Before returning to Washington the end of the month, Mrs. Conness will visit Mr. and Mrs. James Morgan at their home near Boston. She will stop in Springfield, Mass., en route South and will join Mr. Conness in their apartment at the Cumberland on her return here.

Notes of Society

Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, who spent the week-end on Long Island, returned yesterday to Woodley, their Washington home.

Mrs. H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, wife of the American Minister to Finland, who has been spending the summer at Pine Orchard, Conn., has returned to her apartment at the Wardman Park. Her young son, Scott Reid Schoenfeld, is with her.

Representative and Mrs. Estes Kefauver, of Chattanooga, Tenn., have returned to their apartment at the Wardman Park.

Hugh Wilson, former Ambassador to Germany, and Mrs. Wilson returned yesterday from New York, where they stopped at Hampshire House.

Mrs. Walter Wyatt, who was to have entertained at luncheon tomorrow in her home on Kalmia road, has postponed the party because of illness in her family.

Mrs. George H. Dern and her daughter, Miss Betsy Dern, have moved from their home on Bancroft place to an apartment at 3031 Sedgwick street.

Comdr. Earl E. Drockery, U. S. N., and Mrs. Drockery arrived in New York yesterday from South America on the American Republics liner Brazil.

Birth Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Marks, of Evansville, Ind., are receiving congratulations on the birth of their second son, Clifford, on September 22 in Evansville. Now a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Marks is the latter's mother, Mrs. Estelle Nordlinger, of Washington.

Season's Activities Getting Under Way

League of American Pen Women Holds Opening Business Meeting; Mrs. Nell Smith Tells of Summer's Visit in Hawaii

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Club activities in the Capital are definitely under way for the season.

Last night, the District Branch of the League of American Pen Women had its opening business meeting at its studio in the Grafton Hotel. Mrs. Nell V. Smith, a member who has just returned from a summer in Hawaii, was guest speaker. Wearing a modernized version of the native "holoku," she told of her visit in the islands and of the activities of the Honolulu branch of the league.

Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, new president of the local branch, presided at the business meeting, at which Mrs. George Gaydash, chairman of the art section, outlined plans for the season. Washington is becoming art conscious, she said, and urged artists in the Pen Women's membership to place their pictures in shops where, she said, they were likely to find ready sale.

She announced an art fair to be held in December at the studio and a surrealist costume party, sponsored by her section for the whole membership, planned for the holiday season. Two all-member shows will be staged at the studio, one now on the walls, and the other in December, when members will show their summer work. A plan also is under way for having artist and poet members collaborate in making Christmas cards.

Mrs. Campbell announced that the special activities groups of the branch would be particularly active this season. They include fiction, under Mrs. Eva Grant Marshall; nonfiction, Ruby Nevins; journalism, Mrs. Marie Lomas Bockoven; music, Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt; poetry, Miss Ivy Lindsley, and radio, Mrs. V. F. Stevenson.

Talks on campaign issues were given by several of the league members after luncheon.

Mrs. Harry Engelbright, wife of the Representative from California, discussed the situation in her State including the nomination by the Republican, Democratic and Progressive parties of Senator Hiram Johnson. Miss Burton enumerated "failures of the resent Administration;" Mrs. Thatcher talked on Wendell Willkie, whom she termed "the indespensable man," and Mrs. Edward A. Keys, of Montgomery County, discussed the progress of Walter Johnson's Congressional campaign.

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, founder of the league, for 16 years its president, and now Republican National Committeewoman for the District, discussed the part of Republican women in the national campaign as well as the issues before the Nation.

The fall schedule of league meetings will begin next Monday. A board meeting will be held at 11 o'clock at the clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street, and the opening membership meeting at 2:30 in the afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel, with Ira E. Bennett, as speaker. Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the president, will preside.

Republican League Has Buffet Luncheon

More than 100 members and guests of the League of Republican Women yesterday afternoon attended the buffet luncheon which closed the series of events planned by the summer activities committee, headed by Mrs. A. W. Henry Albers. Her co-chairmen were Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, Miss Grace Burton and Mrs. G. Louis Weller.

Women's City Club Begins Meetings Today

Today, section meetings start with a vengeance at the Women's City Club. At 1:30 the afternoon bridge will have its first get-together and plan for a winter tournament. At 3 p. m. the current events section will be addressed by Dr. Elmer L. Kayser, of George Washington University, who will be introduced by the chairman, Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt. Tonight, the Tuesday Evening Bridge Club will inaugurate its activities with a card party open to the public.

Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, club president, will inaugurate her plan to spend each Tuesday and Tuesday evening at the clubhouse, giving committee chairmen and members opportunity to discuss club matters with her at that time.

Mondays the Red Cross sewing auxiliary will meet from 10 to 12 with a dutch treat luncheon following.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

THE APPROVED SCHOOLS committee of the District D. A. R. will open its season tomorrow morning at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts avenue, with a meeting addressed by Mrs. John Logan Marshall, vice president general from South Carolina. Mrs. Marshall will talk on "Tamassee," one of the mountain schools established and supported by the National Society, D. A. R.

Mrs. Arthur C. Houghton, newly appointed State chairman of approved schools, will preside at the session and, following it, will entertain at luncheon in honor of Mrs. Marshall. Her guests will be Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general; Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president Children of the American Revolution; Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, State regent of Virginia; Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, District State regent; Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke, State vice regent of the District; Mrs. Catherine Birney Strong, Mrs. Robert Van Denbergh, and Mrs. Stuart E. Catling, vice chairman of the committee; Miss Henrietta Carruthers, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Carlton C. Hoffner, former State treasurer of the District.

Descendants of '76 Chapter will continue the practice of the last few years and will hold monthly meetings, preceded by luncheon, the second Saturday afternoon of the month. The opening meeting will be advanced to the first Saturday of October because of the Golden Jubilee celebration which will take place the second week of October. The October 5 meeting will be at the home of the Misses Coons, 105½ West Woodbine street, Chevy Chase, Md.

HONOR PRESIDENT — The Soroptimists Clubs of Alexandria and Arlington County will entertain on October 7 with a joint dinner in honor of Mrs. Jean Bennett, of the local club, who is national president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs.

HARVEST DAY FESTIVAL—The participants of the Self-Help Exchange are planning their third Harvest Festival at the Self-Help Farm in Kensington, Md., on next Saturday from 2 to 4 p. m. There will be games, and the Metropolitan Police Boys Band will play.

The farm provides fresh fruits and vegetables for the Self-Help employes at their meals in the two plants and, like all the other branches of the organization, provides many jobs to help those who are eager to help themselves.

NEW PRESIDENT—Mrs. Gerald G. Gross has been installed as the new president of the Junior Mizrachi Women. Other new officers are Mrs. Sam Levine, vice president; Mrs. Frances Coran, treasurer; Mrs. Katie Benjamin, corresponding secretary; Miss Eva Moffitt, financial secretary; Mrs. Herbert Leuchter, recording secretary.

Mrs. Gross has announced as her committee chairmen for the season: Mrs. Esther Alpher, membership; Mrs. Levine, donor banquet; Mrs. Leuchter, culture; Mrs. Eva Pollack, Jewish National Fund; Mrs. Jeannette Patlen, good-cheer fund; Mrs. Ida Ehrlich and Mrs. Esther Mindel, supper bridge party; Mrs. Frieda Forman and Mrs. Mollie Wilcher, sheet and pillowcase shower; Mrs. Hattie Dorfman, publicity; Mrs. Rae Schoffer, Mrs. Katie Ginsberg and Mrs. Forman, telephone; Mrs. Maurice Maser and Mrs. Eva Pollack, hospital; Miss Goldie Lewin, Shekel; Mrs. Irene Gold and Mrs. Katie Ginsberg, sergeants at arms.

GOODWILL OPEN HOUSE—Three of Washington's women's clubs will act as hostesses at the annual fall open house days of Goodwill Industries, October 9, 10 and 11, the director, W. Harold Snape, has announced.

Visitors will be shown through the workrooms from 10 to 6 each day, and tea will be served daily from 3 to 6.

On October 9, the Women's City Club will be the hostess organization, with Mrs. Gladys Middlemiss, the president, as guest of honor. Hostesses will be club members, including Mrs. Gus Schuldt, Mrs. Agnes Giles Newman, Miss Marjorie Webster, Dean Grace Hayes Riley, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Dr. Frances Foye and Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstadt.

The Business and Professional Women's Club will officiate on October 10, honoring Dr. Florence Armstrong, the president. Assisting in the receiving from 3 to 6 and officiating at the tea table will be Mrs. Sue S. White, Miss Eleanor M. Kass, Mrs. Grace B. Stiles, Miss Estelle M. Whiting, Miss Elizabeth Mann and Miss Earline White.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel will be honored and the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will be the hostess group on October 11. Those participating will be Mrs. Hazel Brown Piers, Mrs. Norman McIndoo, Mrs. George Peckham, Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, Mrs. LaVerne Beales, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Mrs. Jason Waterman, Mrs. John Frizzell.

One of the attractions of the period will be an exhibition of fencing by two members of the Fencers Club—the late and hour to be announced later.

Democratic Women To Hear Senator Ellender

Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, will be the speaker at the weekly campaign meeting to be held at the Woman's National Democratic Club, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, this evening at 8 o'clock. These meetings are open to the public, both men and women.

Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick Noble is chairman in charge of these meetings, Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, chairman of the club's campaign committee, and Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the club.

Willkie Text, Urging 'Declaration of Faith' in America

'Fate of Democracy' In Women's Hands, G. O. P. Candidate Asserts in Detroit

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 30.—Here is the text of Wendell L. Willkie's address here tonight:

I welcome the opportunity to address—under your auspices—the Women of America. I welcome the opportunity because I have a job for the Women of America to do. It is a specific job, and a vitally important job. I want to take this time tonight to explain it to you.

As I have said many times, this campaign of mine is a crusade. It is a crusade to preserve American democracy.

But it is a crusade that cannot be fought and won without the help of every woman in America.

Survival of Democracy

I mean all of you—wives, mothers, teachers — workers in business and industry, nurses and social workers, women in the professions and the arts, homemakers and housekeepers.

Every one of you is vital to the cause I am fighting for. Every one of you has the same stake in the survival of our democracy. And if you fail to do the job I am going to ask you to do, democracy may perish from the earth.

First let us look elsewhere to find out what happens to a country, and particularly the women of a country, when democracy falls. Let us look at Germany.

Today, there are fifty million women in greater Germany—that is, Germany and the conquered countries that Hitler has actually annexed.

These women are not free to go about as they please or to do what seems good to them. There is a woman dictator—a single woman in charge of all German women, who has absolute authority over them.

Relegated to the Kitchen

Under this woman there is a vast organization of women wardens and women spies. These wardens can enter a house any time without warning to examine everything on the stove, or even in the garbage can.

German women have lost the right to determine the most intimate things of their private lives. They do not choose their own work.

They do what the state orders. They have been relegated to the kitchen, and they are regarded as breeders of soldiers, not for defense, but for aggression. Decency and self-respect have been taken from their lives.

Their children are taken from them when they are infants of six and seven—poured into the state machine, and turned out as regimented fanatics — born and raised to be cogs in a war machine.

Now I would not talk about that situation if it had no bearing on the cause that brings us together here. I do not use it as an isolated example of something distant.

I describe it because it is now—tonight—the life that almost all the women on the continent of Europe are leading.

Whereas here tonight you are still in possession of something far different from that.

Highest Standard of Life

Just compare your lives with those I have described.

Democracy has given you the fullest—the freest—lives of any women in history. It has given you the vote. It has given you opportunities—without limit—for education, for emancipation. It has made you the chief promoters and patrons of culture in our civilization.

It has given you the highest material standard of life the world has ever known.

Democracy has given and given and given. And now the time has come for you to give to democracy.

The women of Britain are giving the utmost and dearest of everything they have—as free women have always done, when their nations were in danger.

You, and your mothers, and your grandmothers have given in this way—when our country needed you.

It needs you today.

Thank God, it does not need to ask for the lives of your sons, your husbands, or your brothers, in war.

What Democracy Is

But it does need every other effort that you can make. It does need you to do this specific job that I am going to ask of you.

But first, in order to do this job, you must be absolutely sure that you know what democracy is. You must know what you mean by the word.

Most Americans—and all of us are pretty much alike—are careless about that word. We don't stop to think what it means.

Most of us have the notion that democracy is a kind of government machinery—a Congress, an executive, a supreme court, commissions, authorities and the like. Well, of course, those are all part of democratic government. They are the machinery by which the people govern themselves.

But that machinery is not really democracy. You can understand that when you think about the German Reichstag. The Reichstag is the Congress of Germany, and it used to perform essentially the same function as our Congress. Hitler still convenes it once in a while. But when it comes together it does not vote the way people want, but the way Hitler wants. Its life is just a series of "must" votes. It has no will of its own.

Travesty on Democracy

The Reichstag is an example of democratic machinery that has lost democracy. It is a travesty on democratic government.

Now there are two ways of governing mankind. One is by force and the other is by law.

Hitler is governing all of Europe by force. Our government—democracy—is a government of law.

What makes it possible for men to govern themselves by law? A law is just a piece of paper with some words on it. Some laws—some of our most important laws—are not even written down.

And nevertheless, laws are the most powerful instruments that society has ever invented. In the long history of mankind they have proved themselves to be more powerful than armies and navies, or any kind of physical force.

And laws derive this great, strange power from one source, and from one only, from the faith that one man or woman has in another.

In this society of ours I have a great faith that you will obey the laws. And you have a great faith that I shall obey the laws. That faith is what makes our democracy strong. That faith is what binds us together.

If the faith should weaken—if I should lose faith in you, or you in me—then our system of laws would be weakened and our democracy would begin to break down.

What gives us this faith in each other? Essentially it is this: That each of us knows that the other has a conscience. Each knows that the other will avoid evil and will try to do good. This knowledge that I have about you, and you have about me, is the basis of democracy.

The conscience of democratic people is a great and noble achievement. We have groped for it through centuries of darkness—through generations of oppression.

And you know—you know far better than anybody else—how conscience has been developed and trained. We got our consciences as children, from our mothers in our homes, and from our teachers in our schools—particularly the primary schools where we learned to read and write.

Wave of Cynicism

There at home and at school, under the guidance of the women who shape our lives in their earliest, most pliable years, we learned the simple lessons—the lessons of truth and honesty—of sharing and giving—of self-respect and self-control. We learned obedience to the law, and how to live among our fellow men.

And it is just for this reason—because they teach us the difference between good and evil—because they teach us to obey the law—that women are the guardians of democracy.

I say it earnestly to you: The fate of democracy is in your hands.

Within our own lifetime—within the past 20 years, the whole world has been swept by a wave of cynicism and doubt.

Europe today is dominated by the colossal cynicism of Adolf Hitler. He is a man who does not hesitate to accomplish his ends by breaking his solemn promises, by murdering his associates, by converting the youth of Germany to highly trained gangsters, and by laying waste to peaceful lands that lie across his path.

Weakened and Unprepared

It was this cynicism, I truly believe, that weakened the European democracies. The people lost faith in themselves and in their representatives. And the men who had the responsibilities of government lost faith in the people.

Under such circumstances the collapse of those democracies was inevitable. When the test came they were weakened and unprepared. They could not even produce the guns, the tanks and the airplanes that they needed.

And let us face the fact squarely: We, too, in America have become infected with cynicism. I have observed a tendency to sneer at the homely virtues that made our American life so abundant and forceful.

I have observed a tendency especially among our young people to dismiss the moral and spiritual standards of our American tradition. Our young people are inclined to tell us that those standards, in their own words, are the bunk.

You should be alarmed about this. You should be tense with anxiety about our youth. If they are synical, if they are losing their faith, our democracy is in the gravest danger.

Different Kind of Society

We can already see the beginnings of this. Thousands of your youth, who have lost faith in other people, have formed Communist groups, and have received encouragement from high places.

Without exception, in every country whose democracy has succumbed from within to dictatorship, gangs of bewildered, disgruntled, disinherited youths have been the dictator's earliest and most vicious adherents.

They contemplate a different kind of society—a society without liberty—because they have lost faith in the ability of men and women to use their liberty for each other's good.

And that is the problem that faces the women of America. That is the job I am calling on them to do.

You must begin today. You must rekindle the faith of your young people—their faith in other people, which they can learn nowhere except from you. Let no son or daughter of yours walk out of your home or graduate from your school without that faith.

Now I know that you cannot do this job alone. You must have help. And I am going to give you that help.

Have No Faith

I want to put this question to you. I put it to you for your own judgment. Has the faith of one man in another been fostered and developed by the present Administration in Washington? Has this Administration encouraged the faith that we must have to make democracy work? Has it ever shown any faith in us—in us, the people—in our ability to struggle and to make better lives for ourselves?

I say it has not.

For almost eight years, a little group of cynics called the New Dealers has been in control of this country—cynics whom we did not elect and who have no faith in us.

These men have said to themselves: We are the intelligentsia; we know what is good for the people; we know how to govern better than the people know how to govern. Let us therefore—so these cynics say—coin some smart phrases, some pungent words like "economic royalist" and "the forgotten man." These trick words will appeal to the people. They will arouse their emotions and attract their votes, and if only we can keep their votes, we, the intelligentsia, can govern as we see fit.

It is because they do not trust us that those men have constantly sought more power for themselves and the Chief Executive.

It is because they do not trust us that almost every problem is declared to be an emergency—an excuse to add still more power to the central government.

Doctrines of Despair

Seven years ago when this Administration came into power our people were hungry and confused. They gave to the Administration a confidence and support which no Administration had ever enjoyed before.

But just look at the difference today.

Instead of courage and hope, the New Deal preaches the doctrines of cowardice, confusion and despair. It has lost faith in the people. It is governing by force and fear. It depends for a large share of its vote-getting power upon the corrupt political machines of Flynn, Hague, Kelly-Nash and Pendergast. It plays on the fears of the insecure by demanding the votes of the unemployed—the recipients of Government relief. And it pushes us ever closer and closer toward war.

When I am elected, the first thing I shall do to help you in the great task that lies ahead of you, will be to clean house in the Government. I will clean out the cynics and unbelievers, the nuts and the bunk-artists. My administration will be composed of men who believe in the American people.

Don't misunderstand me. There has been a lot of talk about the danger of changing Administrations in an emergency. The closer Mr. Roosevelt gets us to war, the more people say that we ought not to change horses in the middle of the stream.

Well, for one thing, what are we doing in the middle of the stream? How did we get there? The man who got us in is not the right one to get us out.

Another Catch Phrase

But changing administrations does not mean changing the whole Government. I want to clean out the cynics and I want gradually to reduce the bureaucracy. But the backbone of our Government will remain just as it is. The Army will be there. The Navy will be there. All the civil service, the 1,020,000 persons who do most of the work of government, will be there. All the commissions will remain, except insofar as Congress sees fit to change them—and with men on them who understand the functions of our economic system.

I should anticipate also retaining most of those who are now giving their services to the national defense program. Many competent and patriotic men are giving their time to that most urgent and vital task I shall need their services—I shall indeed put them to better use by giving them more authority.

I have confidence in them, and they have confidence in me—confidence that together we can get this industrial machine of ours going full blast—for defense—for jobs—for prosperity.

This idea about changing horses is just another of those catch phrases by which the cynics in Washington, who don't really believe in you, think they can govern you. And if you are to do the job I have given you here tonight, we must drive those cynics out.

That will be my first step in helping you.

Failed to Make Jobs

And my second step is this: I will make jobs for the young men and women that you are training in the ways of democracy.

We cannot blame our young people for losing faith in us, when we ourselves have deprived them of opportunity to earn a decent living and take a real share in our economic system.

That is the fault of the New Deal, which has stunted the growth of American enterprise and failed to make jobs.

I can—and will—make jobs for our young people. I believe in America. I want you to believe in America. And I want you to teach our children to believe in America.

I want you to teach the simple, beautiful principles in which our Nation is grounded.

Let us never be too old—or too cynical—or too lax— or too lazy—or too complacent to teach the words, the precious statements of our American faith—just as they were taught to us, and to our parents and grandparents.

Living Creeds

Put life and reverent devotion into the old ceremonies that some of us have come to take for granted—and some of us have not observed at all.

Gather your families together on our great national holidays—Independence Day or Lincoln's birthday—and read to your children the sacred words of the Declaration of Independence, or the Gettysburg Address. These are the living creeds of our American faith. Teach them that way now. Teach them—with all the love for freedom and human dignity that is in your hearts. Consecrate yourselves to the salvation of the Nation through devoted, faithful service. Fill every American home and every American schoolroom with the living spirit of American democracy—with belief in ourselves, with belief in one another, with belief in our country and its future.

Say with your children—and think—and mean—and live every word of this Declaration of American faith:

I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands; one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

Thousands Attend the Gala Opening of Newer Jelleff's

FASHION'S FASHIONERS—Mary Lewis (left), the dress designer, and Elizabeth Arden at the opening last night of the newer Jelleff's

Special Attractions on Each Floor And Elizabeth Arden, Cosmetics Expert, And Mary Lewis, Designer, Are There

Elizabeth Arden in person, Mary Lewis, the noted dress designer, and thousands of Washingtonians joined in celebrating the gala opening of the Newer Jelleff's last night.

A crowd quickly gathered around the two celebrities in the world of fashion as they paused on the first floor, Miss Arden, her golden hair piled high, and a fur thrown around her black dress, divulged to one questioner that she was wearing cyclamen lipstick.

"I'm too shy," she murmured in response to a request that she step into the mirrored space back of the counter where her own cosmetics were on display—so she herself could be seen better.

Miss Lewis in a rose-pink skirt, with a sweater to match, was asked to name some of her biggest successes of the season. There was time for her to name only one—"the pinafore dress in corduroy."

With 25,000 square feet of space added to the store in its remodeling, it was thronged last night—with special attractions on each floor.

Monsieur Guy, of New York, showed how to arrange a hair-do and anchor the proper hat on it.

Benjamin Schwartz, of New York, shoe designer, showed 175 of his own models, and proclaimed that the open toe is still good. At least 50 per cent of his own models have it.

Miss Violette, designer of housecoats and negligees, was watching a tall brunette model stroll around in one of her leading creations—a read jersey housecoat on which there is a patent pending. Its huge puffed pockets and its sleeves with diamond-shaped tops were the secret of its individuality.

Along with the display of new furs, two models wore quaint old-fashioned seal jackets which were new in 1885 and 1895.

Music and flowers, a movie on the evolution of fashion and other features added to the gayety of the opening which heralded a week of special events.

—the health department has apparently not come to a definite decision on the matter."

Preparations of the revised bill, which Dr. Ruhland said will combine approved features of the original, followed closely a story in The Post revealing that the legislation in question had apparently become entangled in a maze of buck-passing and apathy.

Dr. Ruhland yesterday explained the long delay by pointing out that "the matter had to be cleared with all interested parties before we could take action." He added that the Health Department also has "many other functions which require attention of staff members."

Several provisions of the new measure have been patterned after recommendations of the National Social Hygiene Association, a recognized authority on the subject, Dr. Ruhland said.

He also said the new bill would provide that premarital blood tests may be made by laboratories other than those of the District Health Department, provided such laboratories are licensed and competently operated.

Charles Zorhurst, who recently announced his resignation as secretary of the Board of Trade Public health committee and chairman of its subcommittee on communicable diseases, will meet with Dr. Ruhland at 10 a. m. today for a discussion of the proposed legislation.

Zorhurst resigned because, he claimed, city and Trade Board leaders failed to press the blood test matter before Congress. He said he would have nothing more to do with his organization until "some sort of action is taken."

In its statement, the Board of Trade, explaining that Zorhurst was chairman of the public health committee's subcommittee when the proposed blood test legislation was drafted and sent to Congress in 1937-38, said there was no "present record" that he was connected with the public health committee.

"Neither have we received Mr. Zorhurst's resignation from the Board of Trade," the statement added.

Capital News In Brief

Dog Falls in Hole, Then Bites Rescuer

Policeman Kenneth P. Folsom, 25, of Seventh Precinct, played the Good Samaritan to a little dog yesterday and was rewarded with a bite on the hand that sent him to the hospital.

The dog had fallen into a hole, dug for a tree, in the 5100 block of Loughboro road northwest. Folsom reached down to rescue the canine and was bitten, but managed to carry out the good deed nevertheless.

He was treated at Georgetown Hospital and later at the police clinic.

$800 in Jewelry Reported Stolen

Mrs. William M. Mack, of 2931 Benton street northwest, reported to police yesterday her bedroom had been entered some time since September 25, while she was away, and four rings valued at $800 stolen.

Georgia Voters Warned On Absentee Ballots

The Democratic Central Committee advised Georgia voters residing in the District yesterday that their applications for absentee ballots for the November 5 general election must reach Georgia registrars' offices before October 5. Inclosure of 2½ cents postage for the ballot's mailing is necessary.

Bullet From Target Hits Bystander's Eye

Flying lead from a target struck Thomas Cahill, 26, of 315 Bryant street, Arlington, Va., in the eye yesterday as he watched marksmen in a shooting gallery in the 400 block of Ninth street northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Bethesda Woman Hurt Tripping Over Wire

Mrs. A. B. Foster, of 136 Glenbrook road, Bethesda, one of the founders of the Bethesda Public Library, was taken to Georgetown Hospital yesterday after tripping over a telephone wire in her home.

Mrs. Foster was treated for injuries to the right arm and collarbone by Dr. Karl C. Corley and removed to the hospital by the Bethesda rescue squad.

Slaughter-Shy Calf At Large in Capital

Last night a calf (red body and white face) being led to slaughter broke away and at a late hour was roaming somewhere in Washington.

It was being unloaded at the slaughter place of Fred Miller, 812 Kennedy street northwest, when it dashed for freedom.

A posse of neighbors combed the area carefully but fruitlessly. Police were called, and to squad car men went the following broadcast:

"Look out for runaway calf—red body, white face—about 280 pounds."

Governor Makes McCann a Colonel

A commission as aide de camp with the rank of colonel on the staff of Gov. John E. Miles of New Mexico has been received by Francis A. McCann, past faithful navigator of the Washington General Assembly, Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus.

McCann, also a past deputy of the order, said the honor came to him "out of a clear sky," though he suspected New Mexico delegates he met while attending the Knights convention at Indianapolis this summer "had something to do with it."

Agriculture Office Retires Mrs. Orton

For the first time in 19 years Mrs. Helen D. Orton, 2853 Ontario road northwest, is able to stay away from her office in the editorial section of the division of publications, office of education, in the Department of Agriculture, without taking sick or annual leave.

She retired yesterday on her seventieth birthday. At a luncheon, coworkers presented her with flowers and an airplane traveling bag. She expects to use the bag in journeying to Florida this winter—"probably by train."

Speakers at the luncheon were Morse Salisbury, acting director of the office of information; Dr. M. C. Merrill, chief of the publications division; T. Swann Harding and E. C. Powell.

New One-Day Marriage License Record Set

Marriage license applications here set an all-time high record of 88 yesterday. The previous record for one day was 84, which had stood since Thanksgiving Eve, 1922.

The total of applications for September was 1,025, only 50 short of the August total of 1,075, which was the heaviest month since the records began.

Generally attributed to the draft, the rush to get married started late in July and applications for licenses since have been filed at about twice the previous normal rate.

National Police Academy Graduates Given Party

More than 500 persons last night attended a reception in honor of recent graduates of the National Police Academy who returned to Washington yesterday for a week's postgraduate study at the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

J. Edgar Hoover and other officials of the bureau were among those attending. Highlight of the week's activities will be a banquet of the National Police Association at the Mayflower Thursday evening.

Today the visitors will tour the Marine Barracks at Quantico. Graduation exercises for this year's class and the postgraduate students will be held Saturday in the hall of the Department of Justice.

House Votes to Buy Tracts in Arlington

Washington Airport And Other Land Would Be Acquired

The House passed two bills yesterday designed to increase Federal holdings in Arlington County along the Potomac River.

After amending it to increase the authorization from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, the House approved a Senate bill which would give the Secretary of War and the Secretary of Interior authority to take over the Agriculture Department's Arlington experimental farm and to purchase other land, including the old Washington Airport.

It also passed a House bill authorizing the Secretary of Interior to acquire additional land along the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard in exchange for dredging privileges with the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation.

The land exchanges would be made at no cost to the United States. The Smoot Sand & Gravel Corporation would deed more than 283 acres to the Government in exchange for the right to dredge other areas owned by the United States.

The exchange would enable the Federal Government to broaden its right of way beyond the original 200 feet and to forestall developments in the area.

One of the House amendments to the Senate bill which would enable the Secretary of War to acquire the Arlington experimental farm and to establish a permanent infantry garrison in the vicinity of Fort Myer reads:

"If the purchase of additional lands authorized by this section meets the requirements of the War Department, the Secretary of War may allow the Secretary of Agriculture to continue the operation of the Arlington experimental station at its present site."

No explanation is given for the increase from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 in the authorization for acquisition of additional land.

The Budget Bureau last week sent to Congress an estimate of $3,200,000 to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire a suitable site for a new experimental farm in the proximity of Beltsville, Md.

Under original plans the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has been preparing to move the tourist camp and certain park facilities from the District into the Arlington area after the tract is acquired.

3 Persons Hurt In D. C. Traffic; Death Toll Cut

Three elderly persons were injured on Washington streets yesterday, the last day of a month in which there was only half the number of fatalities as in the same month last year.

September, 1940, brought three traffic deaths to the District. Police records now list 51 highway fatalities for the nine months ending yesterday. There were 62 victims in the same period last year.

Both Dr. Clyde E. Barton, 69, of 2817 Monroe street northwest, and his wife, Dr. Ella L. Barton, were taken to Casualty Hospital last night after their car and a truck collided at First street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. Mrs. Barton's injuries were not regarded as serious, but her husband, suffering severe head injuries, was reported in a serious condition.

In another accident, William H. Evans, 65, of 2900 Q street northwest, suffered injuries to the body and right leg. Struck by a Capital Transit bus at Twenty-ninth and Q streets, he was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Baxter Rejoins Democratic Staff

Norman Baxter, public relations director of Distilled Spirits Institute, has resigned his post to rejoin the publicity staff of the National Democratic Committee as an assistant to Charles Michelson, director, it was learned last night. He had been with the institute for more than two years.

Baxter, a former managing editor of The Post, helped direct activities of the Democratic publicity bureau in the campaigns of '32 and '36. In the latter campaign he was drafted to run a pro-Democratic newspaper in Maine.

Real Estate Board Elects Taylor

Waverly Taylor was elected president of the Washington Real Estate Board last night at a meeting in the Wardman Park Hotel.

William J. Flather, jr., was chosen first vice president, and Charles C. Koones, second vice president. Named to the board of directors were B. L. Colton, S. Dolan Donohoe, Harvey L. Jones, Thornton W. Owen, Fred A. Smith and William M. Throckmorton.

A gavel was presented to Fred A. Smith, retiring president, by H. Clifford Bangs, a former president.

Utah Society Elects Dr. W. B. Ingersoll

Dr. William Brown Ingersoll was elected president of the Utah State Society last night at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mrs. J. Wendell Coombs was elected vice president. Other officers elected included Miss Wealtha Bramwell, secretary; Louis Judges, treasurer, and Jack Maycock, manager of the State directory.

Named to the board of directors were Dennis McCarthy, Stewart L. Grow and Miss Barbara Brossard.

A resolution was adopted endorsing the work of Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah. More than 30 persons attended the meeting.

Committee Named To Coordinate D.C. Dental Facilities

The Council of Social Agencies yesterday organized a committee on dental health to coordinate existing facilities and undertake an educational campaign.

Dr. Frank C. Cady, Public Health Service consultant and chairman of the new committee, told the group that there long had been a need for coordination of detal services, and that he knew of no city in the country where such integration had been accomplished.

Cooperation of their organizations was promised by Dr. Daniel F. Lynch, president, District Dental Society; Ross Garrett, of Health Security Administration; Miss Gertrude Bowling, director, Instructive Nurse Visiting Association; Miss Beatrice Mullin, director of Social Service, Georgetown University Hospital; Mrs. Cleo Spencer, WPA health consultant.

$4,000 More Of Jewelry Loot Is Recovered

Washington police yesterday recovered an additional $4,000 worth of jewelry, the theft of which they blame on a Washington-Baltimore gang of housebreakers.

Previously $8,000 of loot was recovered and three men were arrested.

One of the accused men is being held in Baltimore, and Detective Sergt. Eugene Lambert and Detective George Saunders planned to go there today to determine whether jewelry recovered there had been stolen in Washington.

The gang's practice, Lambert said, was to pawn in Baltimore loot from Washington and vice versa.

Red Cross Memberships Near 10,000

All Units Report Roll Call Response Is Ahead of Same Period Year Ago

Red Cross Roll Call memberships went to 8,905 yesterday as General Chairman Edgar Morris predicted the 10,000 mark would be passed today when complete payday returns are reported from Government units.

Led by returns from general business groups, all Red Cross drive units are registering increases over comparative figures for the 1939 drive, Morris said. Under the direction of David E. McCoy, business committee workers have enrolled 1,493 members as compared with 1,105 a year ago. Government enrollments total 4,232, while residential solicitors have reported 97 more members to date than for the same period last year.

Uniformed workers of the District Chapter of the Red Cross will present a skit at the Civilian Club luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel. Members of the cast will be introduced by Farnham Blair of the speakers' bureau.

An address by Miss Leona Hawks of the Red Cross Nursing Service, and song by John Wilson, barytone soloist of the Metropolitan Memorial Church, will feature a special Red Cross program for employes of the Hecht Co. this morning.

Miss Caroline Thomson, director of Red Cross home hygiene and sick-car programs, will speak at 8 o'clock tonight at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association at Langley Junior High School.

Mrs. Helen Moodie, vice chairman of the speakers' bureau, addressed the Wiseman's Club dinner at the Smorgasbord last night.

Schools Need Job Guidance, Cantrell Says

Lack of an adequate guidance program in District schools is hampering the preparation of youth for jobs, L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent, indicated yesterday when asked to comment on a recent report from the American Youth Commission.

This report, released yesterday, stated on the basis of a survey in several parts of the Nation that only one in four of the 1,750,000 young people who leave school or college each year had proper preparation for work or any clear idea of what job to seek.

"In the absence of a survey here, I cannot say whether that proportion would hold true here," Cantrell said.

"But I think one of the most urgent needs for local youth is a well-defined and well-organized guidance department in our school system," he added.

"We are doing as much as we can, without a salary for the head of a department of guidance. Each high school and vocational school has a guidance and placement committee of faculty members to keep in contact with employers and other placement agencies. These committees render whatever assistance they can to boys and girls who graduate.

"But the teachers on these committees are carrying a fulltime teaching program, and this other work has to be done in addition.

"We need a guidance department head on a fulltime salary, with a small office staff. Such an office would have the task of helping to guide youth into occupations in which they have ability to succeed, and into occupations which are able to absorb them," he pointed out, explaining that faculty committees in the individual schools would continue to function in cooperation with such an office.

The need for such a setup is as great as any other need in the local schools, said Cantrell, who is assistant superintendent in charge of junior high schools and vocational schools, divisions 1-9.

Salaries for heads of guidance departments in both white and colored schools have been requested in recent budgets but have not been granted.

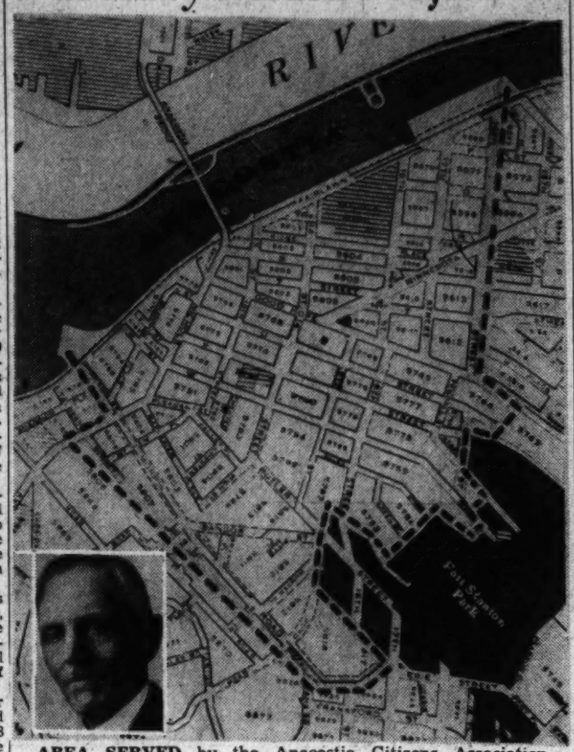
Fighting Anacostia Citizens Win Many Needed Projects



AREA SERVED by the Anacostia Citizens Association. Broken line indicates boundaries. Dr. George C. Havenner (inset) is former president and has been made honorary member for life

Sousa Bridge, Junior-Senior High School, New Park and W Street Reservoir Are Among Improvements Group Sought

This is the second in a series of articles about citizens associations in the District, and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

The new John Philip Sousa Bridge, the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, the beautiful Anacostia Park and the new W street reservoir are some of the projects for which have been fought successfully by the aggressive Anacostia Citizens Association.

Not only residents of Anacostia, but other citizens of the District also have been and will be benefitted by this crusading unit, as a glance at the fall program will show.

Proposed measures affecting Washington which have been fought in the past and are on the organization's must-not-pass list for the coming season include those permitting legalized race track gambling, use of gasoline tax money for general expense purposes, and such proposed legislation as the chain store tax and the optometry bill.

Most influential man in the association's 40-year history has been Dr. George C. Havenner, president for many years and now an honorary member for life, according to the current president, Robert J. Hellmuth, of 1213 W street southeast.

Before moving out of the Anacostia area recently, Dr. Havenner "was largely responsible through his personal efforts for the success of the organization in securing community improvements," Hellmuth said.

First item of business which the association plans to push this fall is the matter of obtaining a branch library to serve the whole territory east of the Anacostia River. "This has been on the calendar for a long time," Secretary W. J. Tucker said, "and we think it will be done this year."

Accompiishments of the society in the past have ranged from procuring street lights and sidewalks to appropriations for a new junior high school to be built shortly. Through the efforts of the organization, Anacostia now has some of the best-paved streets in the city, where formerly were only dirt roads, Hellmuth asserted.

Meetings of the Anacostia association, a member of the Federation of Citizens Associations, are held each month on the fourth Friday in the high school auditorium. All residents of the community are invited to attend, the secretary said.

Senate Passes Bill to Retire Policemen

House Provisions Extended to Take In Secret Service Men At White House

The Senate yesterday passed an amended House bill providing for the voluntary retirement of members of the Metropolitan Police Department, the United States Park Police, the White House Police, and the District Fire Department, after extending it to include members of the White House Secret Service.

Amendments recommended by the Senate District Committee and adopted by the Senate require that pensioners must have reached the age of 55 and limit the total annual payments under the bill to $30,000.

Majority Leader Barkley offered the final amendment from the floor and explained that it would apply only to White House Secret Service men who have been assigned to guard the President for ten years or more. Their retirement funds accumulated under the Civil Service Act would be transferred to the District police and firemen's retirement fund.

Because of the Senate and House differences, the legislation probably will go to conference.

The Senate also passed a Senate bill authorizing the Pennsylvania Railroad to construct an underpass under New York avenue northeast to serve an industrial area and a House bill providing for the issuance of a healing art license to Dr. A. L. Ridings.

Detroit Finds Cincinnati Cocky Over Series

Reds' Leader Thinks Club 'Should Win'

Derringer to Pitch 1st Game; Lombardi, Frey and Ripple Still Nurse Injuries

By Bob Considine.

Cincinnati, Sept. 30.—Confident, cocky Cincinnati became the baseball capital of the country tonight. The Detroit Tigers arrived amidst a chorus of "birds" and cries of "what a licking you'll take!" and the crammed city settled down to wait for Paul Derringer's first pitch Wednesday afternoon.

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Reds, astounded hundreds of reporters today by stating flatly, "we should win." It was the first confident prediction by a National League manager on the eve of a series since Frankie Frisch gave off a similar one six years ago in Detroit.

The National League hasn't won a series since Frisch's Cardinals beat Mickey Cochrane's 1934 Bengals, and the elder circuit boys are 13-to-10 underdogs in the impending series.

City Is Cocky

But there is an air of optimism about the city tonight. Even the fact that the American League—mostly in the shape of the Yankees—have won the last nine world series games played isn't throwing cold water on the city. The Yanks are dead, seems to be the general impression.

Del Baker has not yet made up his mind about his opening day pitcher. At first it was believed that Schoolboy Rowe, who won 16 games this year in one of the great comebacks of modern baseball history, would get the nod. But experts close to Baker pointed out tonight that Buck Newsom, the erratic veteran who won 21 games and lost only four this season, would be, Del's selection. They felt that Newsom, being more durable than Rowe, would be started first so that Baker could use him more often in what promises to be a six or a seven-game series.

Bucky Walters will pitch the second game here for the Reds.

The city, which is taking good-naturedly the worst hotel jam in its history, is a lot more confident that Ernie Lombardi, Lonnie Frey and Jimmy Ripple will play in the series than are team doctors.

Ankle Badly Hurt

Lombardi, the Giant catcher, who supplies a lot of the Reds modest power, is suffering from an ankle so badly sprained that his normal gait, approximately that of a turtle, now resembles that of a rheumatic walrus. Frey's injured toes (the heavy iron lid of the Cincinnati dugout's water cooler fell on them) will be fitted with special braces. Ripple was hit on the wrist in the final game Sunday and suffered a painful bruise.

The Tigers on the other hand are in great shape. They are just as confident of winning as the Reds are, and believe they have more license to be so. Their .288 team average is 30 points higher than the Reds. They don't expect to change overnight from the worst fielding club in baseball, but they feel that their batting power and a well-pitched game now and then will give them the eventual edge.

Hotel Space Dear

There is not a hotel room to be had within a radius extending as far as Dayton, Ohio, and Lexington, Ky., according to an enthusiastic announcement by the Chamber of Commerce—which is doing what it can to relieve the park-bench strain by appealing to local home-owners to open up their spare rooms to visitors.

Speculators were asking $50 for a strip of three box seat tickets, whose face value is $19.80, and the Cincinnati ball club was taking large ads in the local papers and appealing to persons not to buy scalped pasteboards.

Including standing room, which cost $3.30, Crosley Field will hold less than 32,000. There were more than 60,000 applications for tickets.

The teams will work out tomorrow afternoon, then fight their way back to their hotel rooms through waves of clawing autograph seekers, and be ready for the opener Wednesday.

Richmond Man Claims Brilliant Baseball Prophecy

Richmond, Va., Sept. 30 (AP).—Richard Rutherford, composing room foreman of the Richmond News-Leader, today won his Ph. D. in the intricate "art" of baseball prognostication.

Last May 13 he jotted down the order in which he believed the American and National Lagues would finish, and placed his predictions in a sealed envelope. Today the envelope was opened with some ceremony by the sports editors. Rutherford had predicted exactly the finish in both leagues, with one small exception. He had picked Boston to finish fourth and Chicago fifth in the American. They tied for fourth place.

Rutherford is an ardent fan and has seen several world series.

Shapiro Kayoes Fortuna In Third at New York

New York, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Maxie Shapiro, 130¾, New York, knocked out Lou Fortuna, 135¾, Philadelphia, in 2:52 of the first round in a scheduled 8-round feature bout at St. Nick's Arena tonight.

Johnny Colon, 158½, New York, knocked out Mike Destepheno, 153, Philadelphia, at 2:21 of the second round of a 6-round semifinal.

Cuba Heads U. S. Nine In Amateur Series

Havana, Sept. 30 (AP).—Cuba drew ahead of the United States in the World Amateur Baseball Tournament today by routing Puerto Rico, 19 to 3, at Tropical Stadium. It was Cuba's eighth victory in nine games and Puerto Rico's ninth straight defeat. The United States has won seven games and lost one.

The Cuban team established a record for the series by scoring 12 runs in one inning.

Body Fears Pros Would Capitalize

President Ward Issues Bulletin on Proposed Plan; Rule Of Federation Cited

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 30.—The United States Lawn Tennis Association, repeating its long-standing objections to "open" tournaments, announced flatly today it had no intention of building up a "new tennis title" on which a professional player, if he won, "could capitalize for his personal profit."

In an association "service bulletin," issued over the signature of President Holcombe Ward, the governing body of amateur tennis pointed out that the International Federation bars open tournaments, and added that while there is no rule against team matches between amateurs and pros, these would "injure amateur tennis" by introduction of the "individual profit motive" into the game.

Pros Get Build-up

"By permitting pros to make a practice of playing matches against amateurs," the bulletin read, "we would be building up the professional game to the detriment of the amateur game. There would be more temptation for amateurs to turn pro and less incentive to remain amateur, if players, after turning pro, may continue to play matches against amateurs."

The association pointed out, also, that "playing pros" do not have the advantage of playing in amateur tournaments and, thus, are probably short of competitive play.

"Obviously," the bulletin said, "it would be of great benefit to the 'playing pros' if they could regain their right to compete in tournaments promoted by the U. S. L. T. A. and made attractive by its amateur players—a right which they voluntarily abandoned some years ago with full knowledge of the consequences, when, of their own free will, they retired from amateur competition in order to make their fortunes playing exhibitions for cash. These players cannot have their cake and it eat it too. The U. S. L. T. A. cannot be expected to alter its fundamental objectives . . . to employ the resources of the association and its members to perpetuate the earning power of playing professionals by throwing our tournaments or matches wide open to them."

Wants Strong Body

The association added that it was looking forward to the days when a "strong professional association will exercise jurisdiction over all tennis pros."

"The Professional Lawn Tennis Association, which is composed mainly of bona fide coaches," the U. S. L. T. A. claimed, "has been unable to exercise control over the professional exhibition match players who have been a law unto themselves. This was evidenced in the 1932 professional championships, when the four semifinalists refused to continue play until the financial arrangements had been readjusted to their satisfaction; and again in the Finnish Relief matches last winter when the professional L. T. A. was not permitted to exercise control over the financial arrangements between players and promoters."

Rooters Give Tigers Great Series Send-Off

Cheering Thousands See Club Depart for Opener With the Reds

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 30.—Amid the cheers of a deliriously enthusiastic populace, Detroit's Tigers, Cinderella champions of the American League, left today for Cincinnati to open the World Series Wednesday with the National League champion Reds.

The team started off in top physical condition, with nary an injury.

Hailed by storming thousands upon their return with the league pennant from Cleveland last night, the Tigers got another accolade from fans upon their departure—a sendoff undimmed by statistics which showed the Tigers' total of 90 victories to be the lowest since 1908 to cash in on the American League pennant.

Baker Well Again

As the club set out after its first world championship since 1935, Manager Del Baker, recovering from a cold that kept him from directing the Tigers in their game at Cleveland Sunday, remained undecided whether Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe or Buck Newsom would be first to face the Reds.

This pair of right-handers led the Tigers in the pennant campaign, Newsom winning 21 games and losing four and Rowe winning 16 and losing three.

Return Home Friday

After games in Cincinnati Wednesday and Thursday the Tigers will return to Detroit Friday morning. The series schedule calls for games here Friday, Saturday and, if necessary, Sunday.

Meanwhile, a happy city, enthusiastic in its tributes to the team and manager, counted on the fighting qualities of players and pilot to carry the tigers to further glory—a prolongation of American League World Series domination over the National. The Tigers started their league on a chain of five series victories over the senior circuit when they whipped the Chicago Cubs, four games to two, in 1935. Since then the New York Yankees have battered down the National champions four straight years—the New York Giants twice, the Cubs once, and last year the Reds.

Tigers Sign Baker To Run Club Again During '41 Season

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 30.—Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit Baseball Club, announced today that Del Baker had signed a contract to lead the Bengals again in 1941. Salary terms were not divulged.

Baker became Detroit's manager in the middle of the 1938 season, replacing Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane. He piloted the Tigers to a fourth place finish in 1938, to fifth place last season and to the American League pennant this year.

Blocked N. C. Kick Earns $10 Prize For Deacon End

By the Associated Press

Chapel Hill, N. C., Sept. 30.—Johnny Jett, star Wake Forest College left end, grunted when he blocked that University of North Carolina punt Saturday which led to his team's first touchdown, but it wasn't until after the football game that he got spots in front of his eyes.

"Did you block that punt?" asked Coach Peahead Walker in the dressing room after Wake Forest had won, 12 to 0, and upset the dope.

"Yes, sir," said Jett.

Walker pulled out a ten-spot and thrust it into the big end's hands. "Take this. It was worth ten bucks to me any day."

Duke Tops Nation In College Football

Williamson System Rates Blue Devils 98.6 As Result of 23-0 Victory Over V. M. I.; Selections Maintain .850 Average

By Paul B. Williamson

On the strength of their 23-0 rout of strong Virginia Military Institute, Duke's Blue Devils have taken over the top position in the Williamson System with a rating of 98.6.

Despite the unusually large number of closely matched opening games, the system maintained its high average of more than .850 per cent in doping the winners.

Southern Methodist's Mustangs justified the system's pick by sneaking past tough U. C. L. A., 9-6. Other successful choices among the big fellows were Stanford over San Francisco, Ole Miss over Louisaina State, Texas over Colorado, Ohio State over Pittsburgh, Texas Aggies over Texas A. & M., Michigan over California, Auburn over Howard, and Santa Clara over Utah.

Some of the upsets missed by the system were Boston College, 27, Tulane, 7; Colorado State, 25; Colorado Mines, 0; Marshall, 13, V. P. I., 7; Wyoming, 7, New Mexico, 3, and of course, Minnesota, 19, Washington, 14.

Purdue took Butler, 28-0, as was predicted and took the wind out of enthusiastic fans who had expected great things of the Butler Bulldogs. Georgetown's heavy 66-0 victory over Roanoke was more than even the system expected and directed early attention to the boys of the Nation's Capital.

That score indicates power-plus. Michigan also displayed more than was anticipated in trouncing California by the near-incredible score of 40-0.

We forecast Kansas State's 21-16 triumph over Emporia Teachers but cautioned that the game would be hard-fought. It was, for the Teachers led at half, 7-0.

Watch N. C. State

In the major circles we called the turn on Mississippi College over Center, N. Y. U. over Penn Military, and North Carolina State over Davidson. That howling Wolfpack out of N. C. State indicated by its 34-0 victory that it's a team to watch.

Outstanding picks in the small conferences were Dayton 9, Wichita 0, Texas Mines 20, North Dakota 6, and Toledo 21, Detroit Tech 8. Others that came in on the black side of the ledger were Ada, 36,

Chisox Given Edge in Series With Cubs

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 30.—The Chicago White Sox, who skidded into a fourth-place tie with Boston in the closing games of the American League race, will be favored to "take it out" on the Chicago Cubs in the 1940 city championship series which opens tomorrow at Wrigley Field. The American League club consistently has held the whip hand in the city diamond skirmishes, winning six championships to the Cubs' five. The first series, played in 1903, was tied.

The Cub hurling choice in the opener was Claude Passeau, 20-game winner in a season which saw the Cubs finish sixth with a won-lost record of 79-79.

Tomorrow's game and the Wednesday afternoon battle are scheduled for Wrigley Field. On Thursday night the teams will play at the Sox lot, Comiskey Park, with a day game scheduled there Friday. A fifth contest is scheduled for Comiskey Park Saturday night, with the sixth and seventh games, if necessary, in the best 4-of-7 series, slated to be played at Wrigley Field.

Phil Rookie Plans Preaching Career

Philadelphia, Sept. 30 (AP).—Rookie Shortstop Bobbie Bragan of the National League baseball Phillies wants to be a minister.

"Yes," said the 21-year-old youth, "I like to preach. I figure I may be out of baseball in 10 years, and I will be through school then."

Nichols Urges Pan-American Games Here

Congressman Outlines 1942 'Olympics' as Aid To 'Neighbor Policy'

A series of Pan-American Olympic games was proposed yesterday by Representative Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, as a means of furthering President Roosevelt's "good neighbor policy."

Nichols, in a statement on the floor of the House, outlined plans of the recently organized Pan American Olympic Games Committee in Washington to open a series of sports carnivals in the District in 1942.

"I am convinced that if such a program is placed on a permanent basis with games alternating between the United States and Latin American countries it would fit in perfectly with the "good neighbor policy" of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull," Nichols said.

Nichols is a member of the committee, the local branch of which is composed of Carter Barron, Ralph D. Pittman, Edgar Morris and Fred Pickett.

Fred Haney Signed Again to Manage St. Louis Browns

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 30.—The day after ending their best season in six years, the St. Louis Browns today signed Manager Fred Haney to pilot the club again in 1941.

"We were well pleased with his job this year and I am happy to announce he will manage he Browns again," said President Donald F. Barnes. Terms of the new contract nere not disclosed, except that it was for the usual one year.

The Brownies, who knocked off first division clubs so often they became known as the "Giant Killers" of the American League, wound up the season in sixth place with 67 victories and 87 defeats.

James J. Connolly, 40, Dies! Former Hoya Track Star

Copyright by New York Times

Woburn, Mass., Sept. 30.—James J. Connolly, 40, great miler of the early 20's, died suddenly tonight at his home here. He was intercollege champion miler while attending Georgetown University, where he was graduated in 1923, held several decisions over Joie Ray and several times won the Banter mile, feature of the B. A. A. meet.

An investment counselor in recent years, he was born in Woburn and graduated in 1919, from Woburn High School. As a Woburn schoolboy he was junior national mile champion and later, as a Georgetown track star held the two-third mile record for the world.

Unmarried, he leaves his mother, Mrs. Annie Connolly, and two sisters, Helen and Anne Connolly, all of Woburn.

Badgers Lose Another Player

Madison, Wis., Sept. 30 (AP).—All was gloom in the Wisconsin grid camp today.

University officials announced that Al Lorenz, senior varsity end, would be ineligible this season because of scholastic difficulties.

And to make it worse, Bob Bauman, 200-pound sophomore end, who has been Lorenz's understudy, must finish a correspondence course and will be unable to play in the opener against Marquette University here Saturday.

Lorenz was the fourth Badger lost since the beginning of fall practice. Claude York, Don Kolbusz, and Don Rooney cannot play this year because of illness and injuries.

Gophers Warned Of Overconfidence

Minneapolis, Sept. 30 (AP).—Coach Bernie Bierman warned his University of Minnesota football team to forget that opening victory over the University of Washington and to concentrate on preparations for Nebraska as he gave a light workout and chalk talk today.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cincinnati, Sept. 30.—We would be barred from any jury whose duty it would be to weigh with complete lack of bias the case of the American League vs. the National League. Not only are we a conclusion-jumper, but we would be influenced by definite theories not quite favorable to the National League.

POVICH

This is leading up, of course, to a prediction that the Detroit Tigers will defeat, vanquish and otherwise dispatch the Cincinnati Reds in the 1940 World Series that commences here on Wednesday. We could be accused, of course, of picking on a cripple, what with the American League having won every World Series since 1935, but the fact is that the last American League club to lose a World Series was the '34 Tigers.

We're simply stringing along with the puncher again. That's what we like about American League teams—that old sock-cess. This year again it appears to be the same story—National League pitching and fielding vs. American League punch. The Reds' outfielders can cover ground, but they can't climb the fences to get at home run balls.

The two big leagues are, in fact, molded differently. The National League invariably comes up with the better fielders and usually the better pitchers, while the American League puts a premium on power. National League scouts sign the fellow who can scramble after a ground ball or scamper after long drives, but what the American League scouts want to know is: Can he hit? There you have the fundamental difference in the two leagues.

At Washington this season the Nats came up with the perfect National League shortstop in Jimmy Pofahl. He ranges far and wide in covering ground and comes up with spectacular plays on ground balls. There are a half dozen like him in the National League, but he was something of an American League failure because he didn't hit. The American League demands something more than defense from its infielders.

We were just noting the moaning in the Cincinnati papers following the revelation that Lonnie Frey, the Reds' second baseman, might miss the series opener on account of an injured toe. "Frey represented much of the left-handed power on the Reds," it was pointed out. We looked up Frey's batting average. It was a modest .267, a figure that would get him run out of certain American League line-ups. But in the National League that figure apparently represents "power."

Contrast Mr. Frey's .267 with Charley Gehringer's .313 average for the Tigers. Gehringer, not Frey, is power. In 12 fewer games than Frey this year, Gehringer has slugged 28 more runs across the plate. We incline to the plain, old-fashioned idea that runs still win ball games.

That's what we like about the Tigers—their run-getting. We just happened to notice from the figure that big Hank Greenberg, alone, all by himself and unaided, has slugged as many runs across the plate—150—as all four—not three, but four—regular outfielders of the Reds.

It is going to be no help to the Reds that the first two games will be played in the Cincinnati park, where the left-field fence is only 326 feet distant from home plate. That is just a chip shot for the right-handed strength of the Detroit batting order—Greenberg, Rudy York, Frank Higgins and Pete Fox. Even Dick Bartell is a home-run threat at that distance.

Defensively, of course, the Tigers don't compare. The Reds' infield is far superior to the spavined Tiger infielders and Barney McCosky is the only Detroit outfielder who can go places and get a ball with the Cincinnati trio of Mike McCormick, Harold Craft and Ival Goodman. But they will be bounded by the fences, as we were saying, and the Tigers will be aiming at those fences.

We're giving the Reds the pitching edge. It's no great burst of generosity toward the National League, simply acknowledgement that Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters are better pitchers than anybody the Tigers can present with all due respect to Buck Newsom and Schoolboy Rowe. At least they seem to be better pitchers. Always to be taken into consideration is the better support Cincinnati hurlers have gotten from their infield.

But good pitching didn't stop the Yankees last year, and it didn't stop the Tigers in their crucial series with the Indians. A Rudy York home run licked Bob Feller in the decisive game and earlier in the series the Tigers bumped him for five runs in a losing game. They knocked Mel Harder out of the box and polished off Al Milner, too. It was the old test of hitting vs. pitching and you know who won.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Cincinnati, Sept. 30.—Walter Briggs, owner of the Detroit Tigers, might just as well sit down now and write us out a bonus check for valuable services rendered in bringing him not only his first pennant, but his first World Series title.

CONSIDINE

We picked the Tigers to finish fifth in the American League this season, and now we are casting one wavering vote for the Cincinnati Reds to win the World Series. The odds are 13 to 10 in the Tigers' favor, and that seems a just price. They have notably better hitters and no injured men.

The Tigers go into the series with a team batting average of .288 to Cincinnati's .264. Hank Greenberg hit .340 this season and drove in 150 runs. Barney McCosky finished with .338. Rudy York hit .318 and drove in 129 runs. Charley Gehringer hit .314, and Birdie Tebbetts and Pete Fox were around the .300 mark all year.

The Reds have three batters in the .300 class, Schoms Lombardi at .319 (73 runs batted in), Jimmy Ripple at .326 (with 20 runs knocked in during an abbreviated season) and Frank McCormick at .312, with 127 runs smacked home.

Greenberg and York, between them, hit 73 home runs, almost as many as the entire Cincinnati team. The Tigers made 1,539-odd hits this season, to Cincinnati's 1,400, and 883 runs to Cincinnati's 690-odd. The Tigers do everything in a bigger way, including making errors and strikeouts (539 to 497).

So why are we picking the Reds? First, because we've spent years trying to get that job as the rushing-in fool who numbers so few angels among his companions when he steps out. Then there is the Cincinnati pitching, plus a brand of Cincinnati fielding good enough to break the record for fewest errors this season. Atop that the club has a lot of heart, as any club must have that wins 41 games by one run. And it held rival teams to an aggregate batting average of less than .240 this season.

The famed Cincinnati pitching didn't do the Reds much good last year against the Yankees. But that was because the Yankees sprayed them with some downright brilliant counter-pitching. Everyone says that Paul Derringer lost a heartbreaker in the opening game of the series last year, but Paul himself will tell you it would have been just as tough, or tougher, for Ruffing to lose. Don't forget either that Monte Pearson nearly pitched a no-hit in the second game of the series, to beat Bucky Walters.

The Tiger pitching looks pretty good on paper. Rowe, who will open, won 16 games and lost only 3. Newsom won 21 and lost 4. Rowe told us the other day that his arm is as good as ever. In fact, Mickey Cochrane thinks it might be better than it was in 1934. But the fact remains that Schoolie is still a little reluctant to let one go with everything he's got on it. And Newsom, good as he is, suffers occasionally from over-confidence and tends to coast, or clown, or go wild. Bridges was knocked out of the box in his last two important games, and while he will have plenty of rest before his next start, the uncertainty that is a part of the Tiger staff is a definite part of him.

The thing that will hurt the Tigers, for my dough at least, is their infield. York is no gazelle on first, Gehringer and Bartell are pale shadows of what they once were, and Higgins is no ball of fire on third. We suspect that they are going to have to dig deep for a lot of drop bunts and drag bunts before the series is over. For the Reds are shrewd, percentage-playing ball players of the old school. They'll play for one run, where the Tigers will be up there swinging for six.

The Reds symbolically clinched the pennant with a bunt. Jimmy Wilson, the 42-year-old catcher who may do more receiving in the series than Lombardi, bunted on the third strike to squeeze home the pennant-clinching run against Philadelphia. That play isn't pulled once a year in the American League.

The Tiger infield has fewer double plays than any team in either league, and the lowest all-around fielding marks. They have been winning mainly on brute force and a timely pitching performance now and then. But it is possible that they haven't been facing the kind of pitching the Reds are going to let them have. We look for Derringer to win a couple of games, Walters one and Thompson or Turner the necessary fourth. And speaking of pitching, Joe Beggs is better than any relief pitcher Manager Del Baker is able to summon.

The National League won the All-Star game in Tampa on pitching, and Derringer and Walters stood the American League All-Stars on their ears in the St. Louis charity game. We think they'll do it again this time and give the National League the shock of winning its first World Series since the brothers Dean—pretty fair country pitchers—beat the Tigers of 1934, a tougher bunch of Tigers than this crop.

C. U. to Start One Soph in Opener Against Detroit Friday

4 Seniors, 6 Juniors Get Berths

Stynes Earns End Post for 6th Annual Clash; Cards See Movies of Ghesquiere

By Jack Munhall

Bustin' Brendan Stynes, a stocky end from New York City, will be the only sophomore starter for Catholic University Friday night when the Cardinals open their football season with Detroit in the Motor City.

Stynes, who clinched his first-string berth with fine all-around performances in several scrimmages against Maryland, will team up with four seniors and six juniors in an attempt to duplicate last year's 14-13 upset of Gus Dorias' Titans.

The starting seniors will be Julius Stanges, 190-pound left tackle; Quarterback Pete Sachon and Halfbacks Charlie Moutenot and Hank Brostek.

Friday night's game will be the sixth of a bitterly fought series between the Cardinals and Titans, with Detroit holding a 3-2 edge. The two rivals met first in 1933 and Detroit proved far too strong, winning, 26-0. C. U. evened the count two years later in a 13-0 game, but Detroit triumphed, 30-0, in 1937, and 27-0 in 1938 before C. U. pulled its 1939 surprise to halt the Titans.

Another angle to the series is the great rivalry between Coach Dutch Bergman, of C. U., and Gus Dorais, of Detroit, both former Notre Dame football greats. Off the gridiron they are the warmest of friends, but when they are sitting on opposite benches there is no trick either wouldn't employ to send the other's team down to defeat.

Last night, as if afraid that the Catholic University gridmen had forgotten Al Ghesquiere, Detroit's fine triple-threat back, Coach Bergman unreeled films of last year's Cards-Titans game and from all indications Ghesquiere will be watched as closely as a known Fifth Columnist come Friday night.

If any of the Cards who played last season against Detroit had actually forgotten Mr. Ghesquiere, their memories were rudely jolted as they watched the flicker. For it was Ghesquiere who, with his brilliant running and passing, threw scare after scare into the Cardinals before they left the field with their hard-won 14-13 decision.

The 185-pound halfback accounted for the Titans' first touchdown by flipping a long serial to Jim Birringer, and he personally scored their second tally on a short buck after his own forward passing had set the stage.

Reinhart Satisfied With G. W. Opener

Surprised that "the press was disappointed" with G. W. in its opening 12-0 victory over Mount Saint Mary's, Coach Bill Reinhart said yesterday the result was exactly what he had expected and that he was fairly well satisfied with the Colonials' showing.

"Mount Saint Mary's," Reinhart explained, "popped up with a well-coached, tough little team. They were no pushover. We played according to plans, taking things easy and sticking to straight football. With eight major games coming up in succession we couldn't afford to get keyed up for a minor rival. We've got to save our fire for teams like Washington and Lee, Georgetown, Kentucky and the others."

Maryland Squad At Full Strength

University of Maryland's football team, working feverishly in preparation for Saturday's game with Penn at Franklin Field and at the same time trying hard to forget its 7-6 upset by Hampden-Sydney, was bolstered yesterday by the return of two injured stars.

George Glenger, 205-pound guard and one of the best linemen in the District area, and Don Shockey, zophomore triple-threat back, who missed the Hampden-Sydney opener, are now ready to go. They are expected to be of big help, especially on the offense. Glenger is an exceptionally good blocker and Shockey is Joe Murphy's main help in punting and passing. Next to Mearle DuVall, Shockey is considered the Terps' best aerial artist.

Except for inserting Glenger and Shockey Maryland plans no regular lineup changes for Penn, although Dick Shaffer, who was handicapped by injuries last week, may start at Jack Mueller's right end post.

Temple Strong, Warn Georgetown Scouts

"Mush" Dubofsky and George Murtagh, line and end coach, respectively, told the Georgetown football squad yesterday that Temple will prove a formidable test Friday night at Philadelphia.

Dubofsky and Murtagh, who scouted the Owls in their opening 64-7 victory over Muhlenberg, declared the Pennsylvanians are improved offensively over last year's squad and are as strong defensively. And, they pointed out, Georgetown could beat Temple only 3-2 in 1939.

Chevy Chase Golf Title Is Won by Mrs. Hill Again

Mrs. Bishop Hill regained her Chevy Chase Women's Club Championship yesterday in a duplication of the 1938 final, a 3-and-2 victory over Mrs. Landra B. Platt.

Mrs. Hill, who lost the title to Louise Claytor last year, was three up at the turn and had par for an 84 when the match ended on the sixteenth green.

Mrs. Oscar Coolican won the consolation over Mrs. Kurtz Hanson, 3 and 1.

Have a Look at C. U.'s New-Fangled Football Huddle

This new type huddle in which the players face the opposition instead of turning their backs to the other team is reported to have originated with Indiana University late this season. Coach Dutch Bergman picked up the idea for his Catholic University eleven and since Maryland has also adopted it. Time saving and the chance for the offensive linemen to size up the opposing forward wall are its chief advantages over the old huddle, says Bergman. The huddling C. U. players are the eleven who will start against Detroit Friday and they are (left to right, in the line, Joe Carrig, James Nemec, John Schroeder, Tim Murnane, Mike Cherello, Julius Stanges and Brendan Stynes and, in the backfield, Hank Brostek, Pete Sachon (half turned), Al Norris and Charley Moutenot. Nemec posed in the picture for "Sneeze" Kyscewski, who was not present. Sachon, the signal caller, is out of true position for sake of the picture

Mid-Atlantic Practice Days Announced

Mrs. Landra B. Platt, chairman of the women's golf committee at Chevy Chase, who is accepting entries for the Middle Atlantic Women's Championship, announced yesterday the course would be open for practice rounds Friday morning and Sunday afternoon. The tournament is scheduled October 7-11, inclusive.

The local players whose entry fees have been received will be allowed a practice round Friday morning while Sunday afternoon will be reserved for the visitors from Maryland and Virginia. Entries close at noon Saturday with Mrs. Platt at the host club.

Entries for the Elizabeth Harris Cup play for the "Class B" members of the District Women's Golf Association close today with Mrs. G. Luce, at Adams 1261.

The tournament will be played Thursday at Beaver Dam, while contestants may test the course today in a practice round.

Plaza, Card A. C. To Get Trophies

Trophies and gold balls will go to the winners of Sunday's crucial games in the National City Baseball League, it was announced last night by Vic Gauzza, league president.

Plaza Tile nine, B section champion which turned back Klein Tavern, A section winner, for the intersectional title, 11-3, will receive the main award. It was the first time in the eight-year history of the circuit that the B division titlist has won the final play-off.

Cardinal A. C., which defeated Naiman Photo, 3-2, behind Kenny Curles Sunday, will be given a trophy emblematic of the junior section championship.

Two Pro-Am Duos Tie For Grosner Medal

By Morrell W. Whittlesey

The District's defending champions in the Grosner Match Play Pro-Amateur Championship, Lewis Worsham and Ralph Bogart, tied Baltimore's young pro-am duo, Joe Kirkwood, jr., son of the trick shot artist, and Otto Greiner for medal honors in the qualifying round yesterday at Manor.

Worsham, Burning Tree professional, and Bogart, who recently won his second district amateur title over the Manor course, put together seven birdies and two bogeys for a 5-under par 65 and the Terra Mariae team slipped into a tie when Kirkwood dropped his fourth birdie, a four-footer on the eighteenth green.

Last year's medalists, Cliff Spencer and Claude Rippy, apparently had the medal locked up as they passed the twelfth hole five under par. But they slipped over on 13 and 17 and Spencer's birdie on the sixteenth netted them a 66, one stroke too high.

Oliver, Coffey Play

The tournament attracted several out-of-town players, including Eddie Oliver, one of the leading pro money winners of the year, Harry Haverstick, the National Intercollegiate finalist from Lancaster, Pa., and Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., pro.

Oliver, hitting the ball amazing distances but putting so pathetically he used a two-iron on the last four holes, paired with Jock Olmstead and posted a 69. Haverstick, and Leo Walper came in with a 68 while Coffey hooked up with Bobby Bowers, local public links amateur, and posted a 67, fourth best score of the day. Coffey was two under par for 15 holes on his own ball.

Buck Worsham, Chevy Chase assistant, and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood amateur, lost in a playoff to the teams of Jack Harris-Jerry Hart and Baltimore's Charley Betschler-Jesse Dowling, jr. Worsham knocked his ball in the woods on the first hole and took five and Fitzgerald, going for a birdie, three-putted the green. The others all had pars.

Treder-Pitt Fail

Other prominent teams who missed the championship flight included the host club representatives, Al Treder and Harry Pitt, and George Diffenbaugh and Dick Kreuzburg, Kenwood. Two Baltimore teams missed out.

The first round of match play starts out at 9 o'clock this morning with the feature match of the first round, Worsham and Bogart against Mel Shorey and Roger Peacock, who played par golf all day and posted a 70. The second round follows this afternoon and the semi-finals and finals tomorrow. Gerald Grosner contributed $250 and a plaque while the entry fees of $210 made the total purse $460.

Two of the favored teams, Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro and Erford Barnes, Rolling Road, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont, and Joe Balestri, Beaver Dam, barely made the grade with 72s. Baltimore's No. One threat, Andy Gibson and Spencer Overton, played 18 holes without a birdie between them and finished with a 71.

Coffey, with a 70, Al Jamison, a 71, Al Houghton, Gibson and Barnett played the best golf of the days among the pros while Jock Olmsted, Bogart and Rippy starred among the simon-pures.

'Experting' On Majors Is Unusually Bad

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 30.—The fellows you read but seldom read about—the baseball experts—are busting themselves off after an awful kicking around from Old Man Dope.

Usually in the Associated Press yearly poll, the "by-liners" come reasonably close to telling which team'll be where when the season ends—but this baseball year, like California's winter weather, was "unusual."

The consensus in the American League was 100 per cent wrong, and they hit on only three teams in the National League. Here's the poll—and how the teams ended.

Guest Honors Divided at Washington

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, Manor, and Dr. Elizabeth Chickering, Argyle, divided guest honors in the annual invitation field day at Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday.

Mrs. Stokes, who won the Middle Atlantic championship over the same course last year, posted a 79, two strokes better than the 81 of Mrs. Betty Meckley, for low gross honors. Dr. Chickering scored 101-24, 77, for low net honors.

Mrs. T. O. Brandon's 91 was low gross among the members, while the host members among the net winners were led by Mrs. R. D. Young, with 100-20, 80.

A field of 128 competed in the annual event of the host club's women's golf committee.

Mrs. Allan Laing, Capital, won in a draw for second low net among the guests with a net 79, over Mrs. Leo Walper, Capital, 83-4, 79; Mrs. Meckley, 81-2, 79; Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, 84-5, 79; and Mrs. E. Hoffman, Manor, 101-22, 79.

Second low net among the hosts went to Mrs. J. S. Connolly, 101-20, 81, and third to Mrs. L. Franklin, 99-17, 82.

Tommy Webb, former Columbia Country Club champion, led the first day's qualifiers in the annual tournamenty esterday, but a fifth-flight player, John Redd, posted a round that featured the initial day's action.

Redd, the sixth-flight champion last year, who is qualifying with the fifth-flight group this season, was out in 56, 22 over par and one of his worst scores, but he came back in 37, two over par and one of his best scores, for a 93.

Webbs 76 was good by three shots in the championship bracket as defending Champion E. A. Merkle's 79 was second best. George M. Ferris and R. H. Pickford posted 81s, tournament favorite George F. Miller an 82, Gene Krewson 86, H. W. Bradshaw 87 and Al Gardner 88.

The remainder of the field, including Martin McCarthy, Maury Nee, Earle Skinker, Luther C. Steward, jr., and other potential champions will play in the second day's qualifying round.

Best scores yesterday among the second-flight players were Robert Davis, 82, and A. S. Gardiner, sr., 83.

Match play begins Wednesday.

'Skins Buckle Down to Work For Steelers

Still hampered by minor ailments suffered in the game with the New York Giants, the Redskins will get at Griffith Stadium for their Sundown to serious work this morning day invasion of Pittsburgh Steeler territory.

Capt. Turk Edwards, victim of a freak accident, is still limping with a pulled muscle in his left leg and is the only doubtful starter for the Skins' first away-from-home game.

Wilbur Moore's sprained knee is expected to be in fair enough shape to permit him to play Sunday, and Erny Pinckert and Red Morgan—both victims of pulled muscles—also are to be ready for action. Maxie Krause, veteran blocking back, is still slowed down by a bruised shoulder.

Coach Ray Flaherty returned yesterday from an extensive scouting tour but shelved discussions of future opponents in favor of a diagnosis of the Brooklyn-Pittsburgh game Sunday which the Dodgers barely won, 10-3. Flaherty believes the Pittsburgh club vastly improved over the 1939 edition and this week will lay special emphasis on the Redskin tackling, a department which has been slow in developing.

A. U. Prepares For Game With Susquehanna

American University, unable to win a game and held to only one touchdown during 1939, will open its 1940 season Saturday against Susquehanna at Selingsgrove, Pa., with prospects greatly improved.

The Eagles with about 35 players, or a squad twice the size of last year's, are actually looking forward to a winning season. Head Coach Staff Cassell is confident for the first time since he has been at the helm of football at the uptown school.

Susquehanna began its campaign last week with a 20-6 conquest of Buffalo and yesterday the American University varsity worked against the reserves who were equipped with Susquehanna plays.

So close is competition for first-string berths at A. U. that Coach Cassell has not yet been able to decide upon a starting line-up. The backfield will be chosen from among two quarterbacks, Homer Sprinkle and Mel Werkman, four halfbacks, Archie Norford, Tommy Simpson, Bill Garland and Jim Shaw, and two fullbacks, Dick Struble and H. G. Morrison. Halfback Dave Thatcher, who scored A. U.'s only 1939 touchdown, is temporarily lost to the team with injuries.

The Eagles' line is more settled. Capt. John Jablonsky, a 210-pounder, and 215-pound Ken Fox have clinched the tackle positions. Hugo Schulze and Carl Byham have the inside track for the end spots with Mack Potter close behind.

Louisville, Newark Win League Play-Offs

Colonels Defeat Kansas City, 3-0; In Sixth Series Game

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 30.—The Louisville Colonels, of the American Association, and the Newark Bears, of the International League, will meet in the 1940 Little World Series.

Louisville defeated Kansas City tonight, 3 to 0, to win the playoff series, 4 to 2, and Newark defeated Baltimore, 3 to 2, to take the International playoff.

The Colonels won the Little World Series last year, defeating Rochester.

Hughson Holds Blues

Lanky Tex Hughson held the Blues to four scattered hits, while his mates got to Charley Stanceu and Charley Wensloff for six hits, including a home run in the eighth with one on by Freddie Sington.

The Colonels took a one-run lead in the second when Junie Andres walked and Woody Williams and Buddy Lewis singled, sending the Jeffersonville boy home.

Kansas City's only threat came in the seventh when Second Baseman Priddy singled, went to second on a fielder's choice and to third on an outfield out. He died there.

Colonels Finished Fourth

Louisville finished fourth in league standing at the end of the regular season—the same spot they ended in last year.

In a playoff with Columbus they downed the Ohioans four out of six to meet Kansas City. Louisville won the first two games with Kansas City while the Blues took the second two.

The little World Series opens here Wednesday with the first three games being played in Louisville and the remaining four if necessary at Newark.

Baltimore Loses, 3-2, in Deciding Game in Newark

By the United Press

Newark, N. J., Sept. 30.—The Newark Bears won the International League Governor's Cup for the third time in four years here tonight by defeating Baltimore, 3-2 in the seventh and deciding game of the final play-off series. The Bears will head West tomorrow to meet the American Association winner in the Little World Series.

Hank Borowy and Ken Sears, two of the youngest Bears were the heroes of tonight's triumph which saw them trail 1-0 until the seventh inning when they scored all their runs. Borowy yielded five hits and after the Orioles scored an unearned run in the first inning didn't permit another Baltimore runner to reach third base until pinch-hitter Art Graham hit a homer in the ninth.

Meanwhile Orlin Collier had held the Bears to two singles until the seventh when he walked Bud Metheny and Henry Majeski. A double by Leo Nonnenkamp brought in one run to tie the score.

Padden was passed to load the bases and with Tom Hughes relieving Collier, Sears, batting for Scharein, singled to drive in the two runs necessary to win. The bases were again loaded with none out but Italo Chelini came in to retire the side.

Scharein's bad throw gave Eddie Collins a lift and paved the way for Baltimore's initial tally on an infield out following Corbett's single. Another error by Levy following a hit by Collins, who had two, put Borowy in trouble again in the eighth but two sensational catches by Nonnenkamp saved the day.

Two Horses Injured, One Disqualified at Belmont Park

Colosseum Wins Feature, Pays $24.20

Mishaps Suffered By War Regalia and Fiery Steel; Both Are Hurt in Stalls

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The final week of the 12-day meeting started off with considerable excitement here today, most of it unpleasant. Mishaps occurred in several events, one of them coming in the featured Glade Purse, a 6-furlong affair for Class C. fillies and mares. This event saw Charlton Clay's Colosseum, recently victorious in similar company, repeating at the surprisingly liberal odds of $24.40 for $2. The Ariel 3-year-old won by three-quarters of a length.

Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Dinner Date, which finished second by three lengths, was disqualified by bearing out and bumping Rosetown in the stretch. Rosetown received the place and Torchlight was moved up to third. The time was 1:11 3-5.

As the field stood in the stall gate for the Glade, Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' War Regalia reared up in her stall and received a cut on the neck. She was withdrawn by the stewards and all money was refunded to those who wagered on the filly. The refund was $6,794.

In the previous race, a similar accident happened, Fiery Steel getting saught i in his stall and suffering a gash on the right front knee. He also was excused and money refunded.

The steeplechase saw Mr. G. W. Hoblin, gentleman rider from Old Westbury (Long Island), falling with his own horse, Shadow Song. Hoblin broke a collarbone and was taken to Mary Immaculate Hospital, Jamaica. The horse had to be destroyed.

In the Glade running, Dinner Date disposed of Small World after a lengthy duel. Rosetown and the sluggish starting Colosseum made their moves after turning for home, with Rosetown being bumped out of contention by Dinner Date.

Good coaching and more precise play have changed football from the days when recognized powers had little trouble in defeating lesser known opponents. Some of the big boys are getting skittish over scheduling so-called little squads.

For instance, North Carolina should have beaten Wake Forest on a strictly statistical rating basis. But, as we warned last week, North Carolina had dangerous ground to tread. Sure enough, the Tarheels lost to the Deacons, 12-0.

Grid Dodgers Show Better Yard Average Than in 8 Years

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 30.—Jock Sutherland is the "freshman" of the National Professional Football League coaches, yet he is already producing results with his Brooklyn Dodgers' attack.

The Dodger offensive has rolled forward 591 yards in two games, for an average of 295 per game, second only to the 305-yard average compiled by the champion Green Bay Packers in three games. The Brooklyn average is 100 to 150 yards a game better than any Dodger team in the last eight years.

The league's forward passing leadership is turning into a wide-open four-club race, with Philadelphia and Green Bay completing the most aerials—43 and 32 respectively—and Washington turning in the top mark for efficiency, 23 completed in 39 tries for 58 per cent.

Cleveland's Rams are right up there in this department, too, with 17 ringing the bell in 35 attempts for 48 per cent.

Point-scoring leaders at the end of the season's second week are Green Bay, with 68 in three games, and the Chicago Bears, with 48 in two games. Defensively, the Detroit Lions are tops, allowing only 10 points and permitting their rivals to advance only 391 yards in three games.

D. C. Gas Firm Reports Loss Of $58,134

Operating Expenses In August Show $52,446 Rise

Although operating revenues increased, the Washington Gas Light Co. showed a seasonal loss of $58,134 in August as compared with a loss of $33,879 in the same month last year.

The company's net income for the first eight months this year, however, was $997,455, a gain of $149,915 over the same 1939 period.

In the monthly report filed with the Public Utilities Commission yesterday, August operating revenues totaled $464,814, an increase of $19,886 over August, 1939. Operating expenses, including taxes, increased $52,446, amounting to $476,974 this August compared with $424,528 for August, 1939. Non-operating income increased $7,369 to a total of $19,586 and income deductions show a slight saving in August this year.

The report also shows gas sales of 643,655,000 cubic feet for the current month, an increase of 44,675,000 cubic feet, or 7 per cent over August, 1939. There were 160,240 meters in service on August 31 this year, an increase of 6,348 over the same date last year. The company expended approximately $82,000 in August and $706,000 in the eight months of 1940 for extensions to its property.

Underwriters to Meet

The District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association has secured U. of Diamond Life Bulletins, as the U. ofD iamond Life Bulletins, as the speaker for its "Forward Again Luncheon" tomorrow at Hotel Lee Sheraton, it was announced yesterday by John D. Marsh, president of the association.

MR. JAQUA

"What Are We Waiting For?" is Mr. Jaqua's topic. He will come to Washington Cincinatti to open the nineteenth year of the local association's activities. About 120 life underwriters are expected to attend.

Highlights of last week's National Life Underwriters' convention at Philadelphia will be reviewed, and plans for a special membership drive are to be announced by Chairman David S. Bethune of the membership committee.

Testimonial Luncheon.

H. Lawrence Choate, C. L. U., general agent of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of New Jersey, gave a testimonial luncheon at the University Club yesterday for George C. Campbell, who is celebrating his twentieth anniversary with the Mutual Benefit. The luncheon was attended by the other Washington agents of the company, a group of Mr. Campbell's friends and policyholders. Vice President Oliver Thurman came down from the home office in Newark to present Mr. Campbell with the emblem of the Veterans' Club, a lapel pin, gold set with pearls.

$50,000 Power Program

Awarded a contract to supply electricity to the new Washington Airport at Gravelly Point, the Virginia Public Service Co. will embark immediately on a $50,000 construction program.

J. W. Howard, northern division manager of V. P. S., said yesterday that extra precautions will be necessary to guarantee continuity of service. Two sources of power will be provided, he added.

The construction will involve the installation of duplicate equipment at the substation now serving the airport. When connected, one circuit will feed from the V. P. S. Clarendon line and the other from the Naval radio circuit. The two circuits then will connect to two separate three-phase transformers so that if anything happens to one circuit or transformer, the other circuit will automatically take care of the load. Both circuits and both transformers will be in service at all times.

3 Delegates from D. C.

Three Washington men are among the representatives attending the annual convention of Serval, Inc., at Atlantic City, N. J. The delegates from this city are Roderic Peters, regional sales manager; L. E. Libby, district sales manager, and C. A. Barbeck, sales engineer. The three-day convention starts tomorrow.

Bank Anniversaries

Two banks in nearby Maryland are marking anniversaries this month. The Prince Georges Bank and Trust Co. of Hyattsville and Mount Rainier, will complete 28 years of service today, while the Suburban National Bank of Silver Spring and Takoma Park celebrates its thirtieth anniversary on October 10.

The Prince Georges institution has resources of $7,176,078 and the Suburban institution has total assets of $6,344,491.

Changes Made In Investment Houses Here

New Partners Listed By Ferris Company And Booker Firm

Major personnel changes affecting three Washington investment banking houses—George M. Ferris & Co., Inc.; Y. E. Booker & Co., Inc., and Robert C. Jones & Co.—were announced last night. The changes become effective today.

MR. EXNICIOS

Marshall O. Exnicios has retired as a partner with Robert C. Jones & Co. to join George M. Ferris & Co., Inc., as a partner. A member of the Washington Stock Exchange, Mr. Exnicios prior to his seven-year association with the Jones company was with the Washington office of Alexander Brown & Sons, of Baltimore, and also with the local office of National City Co. He is a graduate of Dartmouth College in the Amos Tuck School of Business Administration and Finance.

Mr. Exnicios is a member of the Bond Club of Washington, the Chevy Chase Club, University Club, Potomac Hunt and Sons of the American Revolution.

Booker Firm Changes

Withdrawal of two partners and admission of two new partners was announced by the Booker company. George H. Myers, special partner, and John R. Hill, general partner, are retiring as of today. Myles H. Quail is being admitted as a general partner, and Elizabeth B. Morton becomes a special partner.

MR. QUAIL

Mr. Myers was one of the founders of the firm, which was established in 1926, and Mr. Hill was admitted to the firm as a general partner in January, 1939.

Mr. Quail has been with the Booker firm since its organization and has represented the firm on the Washington Stock Exchange. He is a graduate of Georgetown University Law School and a member of the bar of the District of Columbia, is secretary-treasurer of the Bond Club of Washington, a member of the Board of the Catholic Charities of Washington, D. C., and Prince Georges County, Md., and a member of the Washington Board of Trade.

Mrs. Morton, the new special partner, is a sister of Y. E. Booker, and lives in Richmond. Harry W. Finney, who also has been with the firm since its organization, continues as a general partner.

Major Staples Move Higher, Led by Wheat

Eight-Month Income Of Class 1 Carriers Is $366,257,827

By the Associated Press

Major commodities swung forward yesterday in continuation of the recent upward trend in futures markets.

Wheat at Chicago rose to the highest levels since mid-June for a time and closed unchanged to ¾ of a cent a bushel higher. Dominant factor was strength of the spot market, which reflected the Government loan program. Corn added ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent.

Wool tops at New York advanced an outside of 2 6-10 cents a pound. Demand for futures mirrored active buying of spot wool at rising prices.

Sugar improved as traders pondered possibility of early legislative action to extend the quota system. Other staples higher included copper, hides, silk, and Santos coffee.

Cotton failed to make headway as hedging pressure outweighed mill and trade demand. Final prices were 20 cents a bale lower to 5 higher. Straits tin dipped ¼ cent and cotton-seed oil declined. Rubber was narrowly mixed.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 73.22 from 72.93 Saturday.

Extra Hour Boosts Chicago Turnover By 6,000 Shares

Chicago, Sept. 30 (AP).—The first day of the Chicago Stock Exchange's experiment with an extended trading session produced a volume of 6,000 shares traded in the added hour.

Officials said they were gratified with the results, pointing out that transactions in the added hour were better than one-third of the volume of trading in the first five hours, the former length of the session.

The total of 22,000 shares traded today compared with 9,000 two weeks ago and 30,000 a week ago. Out of the 5,300 shares traded on a full lot basis in the final hour, 3,100 shares were in locally listed stocks, while 2,200 shares were in stocks listed here and in New York.

The Chicago market is the only major exchange in the United States, except that in San Francisco, which now remains in session after the close of the New York Exchange.

Bank Loans Shrink After 4-Week Rise

By the Associated Press

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans to banks declined slightly last week, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

The decrease interrupted a period of four weeks of rapidly rising loans.

In the week ended September 25, banks in 101 leading cities reduced their business loans $3,000,000 to $4,575,000,000. However, these loans declined $8,000,000 in the Chicago Federal Reserve District, indicating slight increases in some other districts to partially offset the Chicago loss.

N. Y Broker Leaves $7,233,926 Estate

New York, Sept 30 (AP).—William J. Wollman, senior partner of a stock brokerage firm, who died March 26, 1937, left a net estate of $7,233,926, a tax appraisal showed today.

About half the estate, after a sister's death, will go to New York charity, educational and scientific groups.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Cotton goods were fairly active today, with popular types selling at unchanged prices. Woolen dress worsteds, tweeds and other sport styles moved in fair volume. Demand for standard rayon fabrics continued good, with orders being in excess of production. Silk goods remained quiet, with limited transactions.

Britain Relaxes Stock Trade Rule

London, Sept. 30 (AP).—Permits for the sale of securities held under wartime exchange control in Canada for the United Kingdom will be resumed tomorrow, the Bank of England notified its share and loan department today.

Wall street brokerage circles looked for a speed-up in British sales of American securities in the New York markets from the plan to permit private citizens to sell their holdings abroad starting October 1.

The decision, it was suggested in financial quarters, may mean England has transported in face of wartime shipping hazards hundreds of millions of dollars in American stocks and bonds for concentration at Montreal and shipment to this country as markets are able to absorb sales.

Woolen Prices Up 5 Cents a Yard

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—The American Woolen Co. announced today a boost of 5 cents a yard on woolen and worsted goods and 2½ cents a yard on tropical and blended lines. The price changes apply to spring goods recently put on the market.

Textile prices have been stiffening as result of heavy buying both for military and civilian needs.

In the wool top futures market, a sharp rise in price continued. At one time contracts were up about 3 cents a pound today.

Sharp Rise Forecast In Cotton Consumption

The Bureau of Agricultural economics reported yesterday that mill consumption of cotton during the year to end next July 31, estimated at more than 8,000,000 bales, would set a new record. It added, however, that exports for August and September were the lowest for these months in more than 60 years.

Domestic mills consumption in August established an all-time high for that month, the bureau said. With improved manufacturers' sales and higher mill margins, the bureau asserted that consumption this month might establish a September record high.

Stocks Close Month With Sluggish Rise; Woolen Issues Strong on Price Advance

New York, Sept. 30.—The stock market closed September with a rise so modest as to indicate only that the list is still beset with indecision. The composite average edged up 0.14 point and trading was dull, amounting to only 403,170 shares.

Aviations did well and there was general firmness in the lower grade rails, equipments, metal and manufacturing departments. A few isolated preferred issues continued to receive special attention but among the active stocks the vast majority of fluctuations were fractional.

Trade and business news over the week-end was of a favorable nature, in only a few cases, however, were such items responsible for any move in share values. An exception was the strength in American Woolen issues on the price advances which the company announced. Wool and worsted goods were jumped 5 cents a yard and tropicals were upped 2½ cents, this being the second advance in the latter category. Strength in the wool markets and Army buying of all types of textiles explain the price increase. American Woolen common was up a half point and the preferred jumped 3 in active dealings.

Statistical news in other fields was not as successfully reflected in the stock market. Steel operations moved up by 0.1 point to 92.6 per cent of capacity. The improvement was negligible but the fact that operations are holding so near capacity indicates that, as reported in the trade, the mills are booking a good volume of non-war business as well as feeling the first effects of the defense program. Steel shares did no more than hold on.

There was some speculative buying in lower grade rails but most of the major systems held around their old levels. New York Central was the most active and edged up a whole quarter. Equipments came in for attention, but more on the basis of their part in the defense drive rather than on contracts from their usual customers, although a few railroad awards were announced. Pressed Steel Car was the day's most active stock and moved upward along with its two preferred issues, the second preferred adding 2¼ points on one round lot trade. Pullman and American Car & Foundry were in favor, advancing 1½ and 1⅜ respectively. Car & Foundry's preferred jumped 3½. Budd preferred was up 4¾.

Airline shares were stronger even than the stocks of the airplane manufacturing concerns. American Airlines ran up 2¾, the strength in the group being due to its favored position under the new tax law.

Bond dealings lacked strong emphasis on either price changes or volume of dealings in most sections today with total turnover of $5,434,000, against $6,126,000 on the last full trading day.

Treasury bonds moved rather narrowly but a firm tone prevailed in dealings on the exchange. Final prices over-the-counter were 1-32 lower to 2-32 higher.

Pressure on Japanese bonds continued with losses up to 5 points or more in some instances. Meanwhile many of the Australian bonds and Canadian issues were firmer.

B. & O. Handlings Steady

Baltimore, Sept. 30 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad today reported a total of 56,450 freight cars handled during the week ended September 28, an increase of 188 over the previous week, and a gain of 463 over the corresponding week last year.

Commodity Futures

New York, Sept. 30.—SANTOS COFFEE futures advanced 9 to 12 points today under the stimulus of traders' hopes that Washington news might further South American efforts to establish a marketing program for the staple. Sales totaled 13,250 bags; December, 5.77; March, 5.95 bid; May, 6.06 bid; July, 6.16 bid; September, 6.24 bid. Rio nominally advanced 4 points; December, 3.92 bid; March, 3.97 bid; May, 4.02 bid; July, 4.07 bid.

COCOA futures closed 6 to 8 lower; sales, 1,219 tons.

RAW SILK futures No. 1 closed 5 to 6½ higher; sales, 1,560 bales.

CRUDE RUBBER futures closed 1 higher to 1 lower; sales, No. 1 standard, 42 contracts; smoked ribbed spot, 19.62 nominal.

RAW HIDE futures closed 5 to 9 higher; sales, 1,760,000 pounds; spot, No. 1 Western light native cows, 12½, nominal.

WOOL TOP futures closed 6 to 26 points higher today with sales estimated at 1,875,000 pounds. Maximum gains of 33 points were made on general buying before profit taking and hedge selling shaded quotations late in the session. The rise reflected greatly improved woolen business. Spot, standard tops, 133., up 4.0.

COTTONSEED OIL futures declined 2 to 5 points today under influence of a weak lard market. Sales totaled 83 contracts: October, 5.36 bid; December, 5.48; January, 5.50 bid; March, 5.60@5.63; May, 5.69 bid.

CRUDE OIL held steady at a nominal price of 4½ cents a pound in the Southwest. The Valley was 4⅝ bid, and Texas, 4.30@4.37 bid.

STRAITS TIN futures closed 25 lower; sales, 33,600 pounds. No sales in lead and zinc futures.

Argentina Drops U. S. Fruit Ban

By the Associated Press

The Department of Agriculture reported yesterday that the Argentine government had relaxed its embargo and would permit unlimited importations of United States apples and pears up to December 31.

The relaxation became effective September 27.

The embargo was put in effect at the opening of the apple and pear export season about a year ago. It was modified last October 7 to permit imports up to December 31, 1939, in an amount equivalent in value to 80 per cent of the imports during the second half of 1938.

Tobacco Review

Baltimore, Sept. 30.—Tobacco receipts for the past week were 479 hogsheads; while sales decreased to 413 hogsheads. The demand seems less urgent and prices were slightly lower the last few days for all but the best and commonest grades.

Farmers continued cutting their tobacco the past week and not over about 10 per cent now remains standing in the fields.

Being a leafy crop, barn room has been at a premium. The early housed tobacco has already cured a nice red color. A light frost on the 27th damaged only a little tobacco in low-lying fields.

D. C. Clearings Exceed Billion In 9 Months

September Volume Of $110,134,234 Is Best in 11 Years

For the first time since 1929, bank clearings in Washington have crossed the billion-dollar mark in nine months.

The September total of $110,134,234 pushed the nine-month aggregate to $1,009,744,206.25, according to the local clearing house association. In the first nine months of 1929, Washington clearings were $1,107,086,077.

The sharp increases, which have been noted in every month this year, are ascribed to the large population growth in the District and vicinity.

For the statistically-minded, here are some figures to chew on. Last month's clearings of $110,134,234 compared with $109,602,295 in the previous month and $99,244,037 in September, 1939. Clearings in the month just ended were the highest for September in 11 years. Monthly figures compare as follows for 1940 and 1939:

	1940	1939
January	$107,137,093	$96,424,506
February	93,153,189	82,733,900
March	110,284,000	103,916,350
April	115,580,390	99,730,563
May	118,940,256	96,395,809
June	118,279,253	108,446,851
July	123,533,492	101,104,931
August	109,602,295	93,631,523
September	110,134,234	99,244,037

Steel Production Edges Upward To 92.6% Rate

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—The steel industry will increase production to 92.6 per cent of capacity this week from 92.5 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago output was 82.5 per cent and a year ago 87.5 per cent.

Many mills are now working virtually at peak capacity, steel circles pointed out. Lagging tin plate production, however, has kept the rate as a whole from reaching absolute capacity, according to trade sources.

Highest rate of the year was 92.9 per cent of capacity attained in the week of September 16.

Stock Turnover Swells in Month

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—September stock transactions expanded to 11,940,530 shares from 7,614,850 in August, the New York Stock Exchange reported today. In September last year, when war broke out, turnover was 57,091,430 shares.

Bond sales increased to $126,289,025, face value, from $79,705,000 in August. A year ago the total was $480,789,000.

Railroad Nets Rise 97 Million During Year

Breadstuff Sets Top Since Mid-June Before Reacting

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday a net railway operating income for Class 1 railroads of $366,27,827 in the first eight months of 1940, compared with $26,187,186 in the corresponding period.

This represented a return of 2.34 per cent on property investment in 1940, the association said, compared with 1.72 per cent in 1939.

Gross operating revenues for the first eight months of this year totaled $2,743,251,822 compared with $2,40,961,970 for the first eight months in 1939 and $3,572,873,994 for the corresponding period in 1930.

The net railway operating income for August, final month of the period, was $66,014,798, compared with $54,567,356 in August, 1939.

Wayne Pump Co.

Wayne Pump Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit for the nine months ended August 31 of $729,066, equal to $2.51 a share, compared with $666,718, or $2.30 a share, in the comparable period a year ago. The company said its investment in the physical assets of its British subsidiary, totaling $382,015 on November 30, 1939, suffered war damages estimated at $100,000 since August 31 last.

Royal Typewriter Co.

Royal Typewriter Co. and domestic subsidiary earned $2,387,753 in the fiscal year ended July 31, equal to $7.90 a common share, compared with $1,653,586, or $5.17 a share in the preceding fiscal year.

National Bellas Hess, Inc.

National Bellas Hess, Inc., reported for the fiscal year ended July 31 net loss of $163,985, compared with net loss of $553,544 in the preceding year. Company operates a mail order clothing business.

Vols and Duke Top Grid Card

Winner May Wind Up in Bowl Game

Cornell Opens With Colgate on Program For Week-End; Gophers Face Nebr.

By the United Press

New York, Sept. 30.—The football capital of America this weekend will be Knoxville, Tenn., where the first crucial game of the 1940 football season—one which will have an important bearing in the race for the mythical national title—will be played.

It's Tennessee, unbeaten last year except by Southern California in the Rose Bowl, against Duke's Blue Devils, reported to be one of the mighty teams of this campaign. Duke, with a wealth of reserves, is expected to be the favorite, and the word from Durham, N. C., is that the citizens already are betting that the Blue Devils win by two touchdowns.

The team which wins this battle conceivably can go undefeated this year and lay a strong claim to the national title and get a spot in one of the New Year's Day bowl games.

Other Big Games

Although this is the No. 1 game of the day, each section of the country has conference or intersectional battles that will produce plenty of fireworks. And a few more great names probably will be added to the list of defeated teams that was started off in great fashion last week with such names as Tulane, North Carolina, Louisiana State, Washington and U. C. L. A.

Some of the teams which are expected to be good this year have their first starts this week. Cornell, unbeaten in 1939, tees off against a tough customer in Colgate. Notre Dame opens against College of the Pacific and before you laugh at that one think back to last year's opening day when this little school, coached by old Amos Alonzo Stagg, knocked over mighty California.

Fordham opens its suicide schedule against West Virginia; Northwestern takes on Syracuse; Princeton plays Vanderbilt in one of many intersectional games scheduled this week-end; and Georgia Tech takes on an easy one in Howard.

Big Teams Coast

The Cornell-Colgate game tops an Eastern program that is loaded with big teams against pushovers. Some of the better Eastern games are Penn-Maryland, Pittsburgh-Missouri and Yale-Virginia.

The Midwest has a flock of good games, chief of which is Minnesota, apparently off to a good year, against Nebraska, Big Six favorite which opens up this week. Indiana plays Texas in an intersectional game and Ohio State, defending Big Ten champion, meets Purdue in a conference game. Michigan plays Michigan State and Wisconsin opens against Marquette.

With the exception of Duke-Tennessee, the Southern program hasn't many good games to offer. Some of the best are South Carolina-Georgia; Alabama-Mercer; Louisiana-Holy Cross; Tulane-Auburn and Kentucky-Washington and Lee.

California-St. Mary's tops the Pacific Coast program which also includes Southern California-Oregon State; Stanford-Oregon; Washington-Idaho and Washington State-Montana.

Mickey Says Tribe Hasn't Approached Him

Detroit, Sept. 30 (AP).—Mickey Cochrane, who managed the 1934-35 pennant winning Detroit baseball teams, said today he had not been approached by the Cleveland Indians' management regarding a possible appointment as manager if Oscar Vitt resigns.

Now a manufacturer's agent, Cochrane said, "I have not been considering my return to baseball," adding "I'd have to get a pretty concrete offer first."

Capital Wins 1st Softball Play-Off

Capitol Theater's music-minded softballers won the opening game of the playoff for the Night Owl League title yesterday, 8-2, over Mayfair. The teams meet again tomorrow at 10 a. m. on the Ellipse.

Representative Wins Trophy

Representative Clyde T. Ellis, of Arkansas, holds the trophy he won for landing the largest hardhead of the 1940 season off one of Uncle Billie's boats at North Beach, Md. Ellis' catch weighed 3 pounds, 14 ounces. The Arkansas angler said the fish put up such a fight he thought he had snagged bottom

Standard Five Takes Honors In Pin League

Standard's quintet took all individual and team honors last night as the Petroleum League met at Columbia alleys. The Standard team rolled a high game and set of 576-1,690, while Don Boyer, also of Standard, was the individual star with a 140 and 407. The Standard team took three from Esso Extra.

The Sanitary Grocery League resumed play last night at Convention Hall with the Sanico Meats team taking honors with highs of 160 and 1,724. Gary, Royal Satin, bowled a high individual game of 154, while Magaha, S. E. A., took individual set with 392.

The Georgetown Commercial league met at Georgetown Recreation and A. Burrows, Chappell Billiards, rolled high game of 152 to capture the weekly prize offered by Sam's Men's Shop. Oscar Swain, of Thompson Welding, took set laurels with 429. The Party Popcorn quintet captured all team honors with 617-1,748, Wilcox's 392 set aiding them.

The Silver Spring-Georgia Avenue League had its fourth session at Silver Spring alleys with National Electric Machine taking team honors with a 642 game and 1,769 set. The National boys took three from Schrider Plumbing to stay far in front in the standings with 10 victories against 2 losses. Five teams are tied for second place with 7 wins and 5 defeats. R. Chalfonte, of Valdenar's Landscaping, and R. L. Willis, of Willis Builders, won high individual game and set with 148 and 382, respectively. Bert Drott is official scorer of this league.

The Methodist Church league resumed play at Brookland Recreation and Max Snellings broke season records with a high game and set of 148-404. The Hyattsville quintet, also in a record breaking mood for the evening, garnered glory with team game and set of 579-1,676 which are season highs. The Douglas quintet won three from Trinity to stay in first place, with 12 straight victories. Hyattsville took 3 from Emory No. 1.

Sher & Cohen's Market quintet vanquished the Frank's Caterettes five at Arlington Bowling Center, 1,779-1,688. Leon Fleisher led the S. & C. Market boys with a 375 set. The Frank's Caterettes belong to the Clarendon Major League while the Sher & Cohen boys do their rolling in the Arlington Commercial.

The same night Al Wright, bowling in a twosome but with a foul line judge to make it official, found the 1-3 pocket and smashed through to a game of 180 and a phenomenal set of 491.

Bill Martin, Aeronautics, and Frank Wrenn, S. & A., went into a two-way tie for high individual game with 144 as Andy rice, Hydrographic, took set honors with 414 in Navy Department league rolling at Arcadia. Price also was runner-up on high individual game with 142. The Bureau of Engineering quintet captured high team game with 589 while the Hydrographic five garnered high set honor with 1,716 to enter into a tie with Bureau of Engineering for first place in the standing. Gerald Small is scorer for the Navy boys.

St. Louis Cards Drop 80,000 In Attendance

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 30.—The only thing that saved the St. Louis Cardinals from a financial "flop" this season was the sale of Joe Medwick to Brooklyn for $125,000 and several players, President Sam Breadon disclosed today.

"Even counting the attendance at night games, our total for the year will show a drop of about 80,000 from the 1939 figure of 411,000," Breadon stated.

Bockwinkle Meets Danno O'Mahoney Thursday at Arena

Warren Bockwinkle, wrestling's newest "glamour boy," will meet Danno O'Mahoney, in the semi-windup on Thursday night's card at Turner's Arena.

Bockwinkle's conqueror last week, Lou Plummer will be in the spotlight teaming with Eddie Newman, in a feature bout against the wild Zaharias brothers, Chris and Babe.

Closed out yesterday was a 30-minute bout between Henry Kulkowich, the "Mad Russian," and Paul Bosch, Pacific Coast grappler.

Overlin Beats Lane in Tune-up

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 30 (AP).—Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin, appearing in his last tune-up before he risks his title against Steve Belloise at Madison Square Garden on November 1, outpointed Larry Lane, Trenton Negro light-heavyweight, in ten fast rounds tonight.

Lane outweighed Overlin, 169 to 164, but the Washington, D. C., titleholder outboxed him throughout. Referee Benny Leonard gave Overlin six rounds, Lane two and called the other two even. It was an over-the-weight match.

Comiskey to Try Comeback Oct. 15

New York, Sept. 30.—Pat Comiskey the young New Jersey Irishman who was heading for a heavyweight title bout before he was knocked out by Max Baer last week, will make his first attempt at a comeback by battling Henry Cooper, a Brooklyn heavyweight, in a ten-round bout in New York on Tuesday, October 15, Promoter Jimmy Bronson announced tonight.

Comiskey lasted 2 minutes and 39 seconds of the first round with Baer.

Ackerman On Fishing

An angler on the north Jersey coast last week beached a 65-pound channel bass after a fight lasting an hour and 15 minutes. It will probably be entered in the George Ruppert contest. If so, this grand fish must take second place, for a Virginia angler landed one a pound heavier at Wachapreague early in July and is holding first place with it.

ACKERMAN

Even though two channel bass were caught last year on the North Carolina coast that equaled the world's record of 74 pounds, and several have been caught this year better than 60, two years out of three a 65-pound fish would take top honors. However, a second place fish this season is worth a hundred bucks, which isn't hard for anyone to take.

The judges awarding the two Tycoon rods for Frank O'Brien, of Miami, to the sportsman and sportswoman releasing and tagging the greatest number of white marlin at Ocean City this season were about to toss a coin to see whether the ladies' rod would go to Mrs. Lee Fisher, of Baltimore, or to Mrs. C. L. Parker, of Washington.

When news of the catch of a marlin on Capt. Leo Droughton's Sampan arrived on Thursday Mrs. Fisher called the toss off until she had had one more try. We believe Mrs. Parker was among the local anglers to go back again, also.

With either one catching another marlin the judges would breathe easier as far as the ladies are concerned. If the luck fell to Mrs. Fisher it would mean that Capt. Red Hall would get another released fish to tie him up with Capt. Crawford Savage at five each for the Townsend award. Easier split than a rod, though, for the hundred dollars would be divided and a duplicate plaque issued.

Downtown sports stores are really selling the yellow-headed white feather lures these days because the cold weather of last week brought the striper schools to the surface in regular fall form, and that lure is what they are taking best.

Capt. Johnny Manifold at Deale brought in a catch of 53 on Friday, caught close in under the shore near the boys' camp below Seaside Beach. They weighed up to eight pounds.

The schools aren't sticking to any one feeding grounds, for one day they will raise best in one place, while on the following day another. Any place in the upper bay looks good, however, for over the week-end boats fishing on all the accepted grounds came in with from 1 to 20 and more. The average is about 2 pounds.

Erl Roman, the Miami fishing columnist, accompanied us last month on an inspection trip down the river with Col. Robert S. Thomas, engineering officer in charge for the eradication of the water chestnut. He was deeply interested, particularly because Col Thomas, some years ago, was in charge of the eradication of the water hyacinth in Alabama and Mississippi.

He writes on his return that Floridians should count themselves lucky with their hyacinth troubles for, unlike the water chestnut, the plants are beautiful and the flowers fragrant. And, too, hyacinths can be killed with sprays.

Wade, Neyland Renew Grid Feud at Knoxville Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Durham, N. C., Sept. 28.—There is no series in football which, for sheer brilliance of play and bitterness of combat, can surpass the series of games that have been played by the teams of Capt. Wallace Wade of Alabama and Duke and Major Robert Neyland of Tennessee.

Those two former Army officers—unquestionably the two ranking coaches in Dixie today and whose records put them right up there with the one-two in the land—had rather beat each other than anyone else and when their teams come together the fans see two football teams as teamed-up and hell-for-leather as two football teams can be.

"THE CLASH OF GIANTS"
By Morgan Blake
(Atlanta Journal)

"The fur will fly in Knoxville
And loud will be the crash,
The gore will flow in Knoxville
When Wade and Neyland clash.

"Oh, what a treat in Knoxville
Oh, fortunate the fans,
Who see the mighty struggle
Between these gridiron clans.

"The cry is 'On to Knoxville'
Where history will be made
To see the clash of giants
When Major Bob meets Wade."

Saturday Tennessee and Duke resume their rivalry after a two-year lapse. That two-year lapse saw both go to the Rose Bowl—Duke in 1938 and Tennessee last January. Some say that either of the two teams might have gone to the coast before—it was the first trip for each—but that they put so much into their regular season game that they didn't have it left to go on through undefeated.

They resume play at Knoxville. A "consolation" game, it is, as both lost to Southern California on the coast—Duke by 7-3, Tennessee by 14-0.

Wade has crossed up with Tennessee 10 times—one year when Bill Britton was in charge while Neyland was in the Army. Here are the scores of past games:

1928—Alabama	13:	Tennessee 15
1929—Alabama	0:	Tennessee 6
1930—Alabama	18:	Tennessee 6
1931—Duke	2:	Tennessee 25
1932—Duke	13:	Tennessee 16
1933—Duke	10:	Tennessee 2
1934—Duke	6:	Tennessee 14
1935—Duke	19:	Tennessee 6 (Bill Britton, coach)
1936—Duke	13:	Tennessee 13
1937—Duke	0:	Tennessee 0

Six Washington high school students—to be more specific six students from Woodrow Wilson High School, under the direction of Instructor Joseph Kochka—are to take part in a Nation-wide radio program tonight, previewing the 1940-41 season of C. B. S.'s "American School of the Air."

Speaking from WJSV's studios, the Washington pupils will discuss "The Defense of the Americas," a topic to which a similar group of students from New York and Chicago also will lend their youthful minds during the half hour program which will be heard from 10:15 to 10:45 p. m.

The participants from Washington are Donald Baker, Jack Bennett, Donald Cummings, Daniel Foster, Mark Leiserson and Robert Sucher.

Each week sees five varied programs presented under its auspices. Mondays it's stories of "Americans at Work;" Tuesdays are devoted to folk music of the Americas; Wednesdays it's geography and science and it comes from the American Museum of Natural History; Thursdays are given over to literature under the title "Tales from Far and Near," and Fridays to dramatizations and discussions of current events.

The Post Radio Time Table

11 A. M., WMAL—Dr. Arnulfo Arias makes his inaugural address as President of Panama in the Olympic Stadium in Panama City.

7:30 p. m., WMAL—Dreams Come True, the local musical half hour which has been heard for the past two years on Thursdays over WRC, commences a new time schedule. Lynne Allison, Ross Fillon, El Gary, Grace Shannon and her Grace Notes are the stars. This inaugural airing will be broadcast from the Nee store, celebrating its sixtieth anniversary at Seventh and H streets. The singers will appear in costume of the store's inception and the public is invited to the airing.

8, WMAL—Ben Bernie brings Carol Bruce, of the musical comedy, "Louisiana Purchase," as permanent soloist for his new series. He'll also offer a new music quiz, with participants drawn from the audience and pulling their rewards from a goldfish bowl.

8:30, WMAL—Clare Boothe, author of "The Women" and "Kiss the Boys Good-bye," as well as the new volume of her European adventures last spring, "Spring in Europe," takes her beauty and, one trusts, her wits, to Information Please.

9, WJSV—It's a fourth anniversary for We, the People, and the eight most popular guests to appear on the hour are being brought back by a ballot's command performance.

9:30, WRC—Fibber McGee and Molly return to Wistful Vista with tales of their summer's journeying.

MOTIONS COURT

In any case where postponement of the hearing of a motion is to be requested, notice should be given the motions clerk not later than 3 o'clock the afternoon before such motion is set for hearing. It will be the policy of the court not to grant postponements if the aforesaid notice is not given except when extraordinary conditions have prevented the giving of the notice.

Roll call of motions will be at 9:45 a. m. as heretofore has been the practice.

Due to the illness of Justice Goldsborough, the Motions Assignment scheduled before him has been transferred to Justice Bailey.

Md. Guard To Mobilize On January 3

Call, Originally Set For Dec. 15, Delayed After Conference

Frederick, Md., Sept. 30 (AP).—The Twenty-ninth Division, Maryland National Guard, which includes all National Guard troops in the State, will be mobilized for a year's service on January 3, Brig. Gen. D. John Markey, commanding officer of the First Regiment, announced today after a conference of National Guard field officers.

He added that the mobilization date was contingent upon the completion of adequate housing facilities at Fort Meade, where the division will be located.

It was believed that the January 3rd date would apply also to the 104th Observation Squadron of the Maryland National Guard, which will encamp at Detrick Field, Frederick, for the year's training.

An original plan called for the mobilization on December 15, but because of the holiday season it was decided to postpone it until after the first of the year.

The conference was attended by Gen. Markey, Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, and Capt. G. William Trout, of the First Regiment, and Lieut. Col. Ralph Holliday, regular Army officer on duty with the regiment.

Gen. Markey said administration problems incident to the induction of the National Guard into Federal service were discussed.

The National Guard has been authorized to increase the officer personnel to peace strength, which for the First Regiment is 78, but the enlisted men strength of 1,200 will not be increased to its peace strength of 1,903 until mobilization.

Officers said the Guard expected to recruit to its enlisted men peace strength during its ten-day stay in armories throughout the State, which will follow the call into Federal service.

Contracts for $8,000,000 in buildings and improvements at Fort Meade have been awarded and construction is well under way.

Mrs. Mary Walker Funeral Services To Be Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Ford Walker, who died Sunday at her residence in the Kenesaw Apartments, will be conducted at 10 a. m. today at the S. H. Hines Funeral Chapel, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Walker, widow of Charles J. Walker, a Washington real estate man, was a lifelong resident of the Capital and belonged to a family long active in the civic affairs of south Washington. She was the daughter of James H. and Sarah Dove Ford.

Mrs. Walker was a member of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church.

She is survived by a son, Karl F. Walker, a granddaughter, Phyllis Walker, and a grandson, Karl Ford Walker, jr.

Dr. John C. Palmer will officiate at this morning's services.

2 Missiles Hurled At Willkie; Girl Hit

Detroit, Sept. 30 (AP).—While Wendell Willkie was speaking in Cadillac Square in downtown Detroit at the end of an automobile tour from the suburbs today, a melon was thrown from a tall office building, striking the feet of a policeman near Willkie.

As Willkie approached his hotel, a metal waste basket fell from a high window. It struck Miss Betty Wilson, 16, on the head, causing a deep cut. She was taken to Receiving Hospital.

Heart Attack Fatal To Homer Harlan

Homer B. Harlan, 77, a civil engineer with the War Department for more than 40 years until his retirement two years ago, died unexpectedly yesterday of a heart attack at his home, 64 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

A native of Grand Rapids, Mich., he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mildred C. Harlan; a sister, Mrs. Harriet H. Stoneman, Dexter, Mich., and six grandchildren.

CLARA WELLS HERBERT
New Librarian

Miss Clara W. Herbert, assistant city librarian since 1920, will become librarian today, succeeding Dr. George F. Bowerman, who retired yesterday after 36 years' service.

She will undertake her new duties fully aware of the part the library must take in the national emergency while continuing its normal expansion and service to a growing clientele now numbering more than 151,000 persons, exclusive of the school services, she said.

The new librarian is particularly interested in expanding the adult educational service.

Miss Herbert, who lives at 3407 Thirty-fourth place northwest, attended Vassar College, 1894-96, and the Carnegie Library School, 1903-04. She has been children's librarian in the Brooklyn Public Library and here, directed the Washington Library training class, 1914-20. She has written widely on subjects in her field.

She is a member and past president of the District Library Association, a member of the American Library Association and the chairman this year of its professional training section. She is affiliated with the Monday Evening Club, the American Association of University Women and the Twentieth Century Club.

Dr. Bowerman will be tendered a luncheon at 1 p. m. Saturday at the Mayflower Hotel by the board of trustees of the library and the Board of Trade.

House Passes Measure To Hospitalize Veterans

The House yesterday passed a bill declaring that ailing overseas veterans of 1917-18 shall be presumed to have suffered disabilities in service unless there is proof to the contrary. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Chairman Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, of the House World War Veterans Committee, said that the measure would "give veterans the benefit of the doubt" in cases where records were not clear and were not available.

Mary Sibley Indicted Here For Murder

Woman, 25, Charged In Fatal Shooting Of Salesman

Mary Elizabeth Sibley, 25, who admittedly shot to death Oscar S. Rush, jr., 42-year-old salesman, two weeks ago, was indicted yesterday on a charge of first degree murder.

Rush was shot as he sat in his car in a lot at 1314 Good Hope road southeast, talking to the wives of two fellow salesmen. Miss Sibley signed a statement in which she said that she shot Rush in a fit of jealousy after a 24-hour quarrel.

The indictment was among 32 presented in the District Court yesterday, as the July grand jury concluded its service.

Those indicted were:

First degree murder—Mary Elizabeth Sibley, 25, for the death of Oscar S. Rush, jr., 42, of a gunshot wound he suffered September 16 at 1314 Good Hope road southeast; Hattie Louise Lowe, 26, colored, for the death of John Flulit, 45, colored, of a stab wound he suffered September 14 at 72 F street southwest.

Manslaughter—Earl C. Moore, 27, for the death of Raymond L. Murphy, 25, in an automobile crash on Riggs road northeast near the District Line on August 26.

Rape—Robert Lee Paige, 25, colored; George M. Gordon, 26, colored; Daniel J. Matthews, 23, colored.

Grand larceny—Paul M. Riggs, 21; Homer Furr, 26; James H. Harley, 20, colored.

Unauthorized use of automobile—Homer Furr, 26; James H. Harley, 20, colored; Charles C. Emmert, 32, colored; Paul R. Peterson, 27; John Hopkins, 26, colored; Edward A. Nicholas, 19; Jerry C. McCutcheon, 26, colored; Levi Mack, 20, colored.

Larceny after trust—Edward W. Bergh, 46; Gerald C. McDermott, 31.

Housebreaking and larceny—Edward A. Nichols, 19; Paul H. Calhoun, 19; Wilbert J. Tucker, 20, colored; Theadore A. Lucas, 18, colored; William G. Pond, jr., 28; Thomas Hanna, 33; Walter C. Brady, 37; Whittier Jones, 19, colored; Russell J. Washington, 18, colored.

Housebreaking—James A. Williams, 31, colored.

Receiving stolen property—Andrew W. Carter, 19, colored.

Impersonating a Government officer—Edwin Clayton Jefferis, 30.

Criminal libel—William B. Holt, 69.

Forgery and passing a forgery—Bertha M. Ferrer, 35.

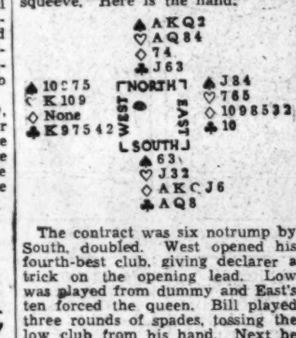
Robbery—Harold W. Tyler, 19, colored; Olin James Freeman, 21, colored.

Assault with a dangerous weapon—Willie McDaniels, 20, colored; Robert L. Cheek, 33, colored.

The grand jury dismissed these charges: Unauthorized use of automobile, Raymond V. Masterson and Victor G. Scott; assault with dangerous weapon, Anna Foster, 32, colored, and Eddie Bean, 28, colored.

Contract Bridge

Today A. Phillips Bill presents an unusual deal, involving a squeeve. Here is the hand:



The contract was six notrump by South, doubled. West opened his fourth-best club, giving declarer a trick on the opening lead. Low was played from dummy and East's ten forced the queen. Bill played three rounds of spades, tossing the low club from his hand. Next he eight and declarer won with the ace. His hope that this suit would break died when West showed out.

He played the jack of hearts. West covered with the king and dummy's ace won. A club was returned to South's ace. Now the king and queen of diamonds were played; West discarded clubs and North tossed a heart.

On the jack of diamonds West, with the spade ten, the heart ten-nine and the club king, was squeezed. If he threw the spade dummy's spade would be high; if he threw a heart dummy's heart eight would win, and if he tossed the club king dummy's jack would be good. He conceded defeat, and the Deerfield professor scored six notrump doubled. He lost one trick at the end.

Guilty Plea Slated Today In Kidnaping

Lawyer Says Suspect Will Admit Taking De Tristan Boy

By the Associated Press

Redwood City, Calif., Sept. 30.—Wilhelm Muhlenbroich, 40, will plead guilty tomorrow to a charge of kidnaping 3-year-old Marc de Tristan.

Muhlenbroich will appear in court at 10 a. m..

He protested "I don't want an attorney," when the court asked at his arraignment today whether he was represented by counsel.

But Judge Maxwell McNutt said he would not let a man plead a felony charge without first having been advised by counsel, and appointed Joseph J. Bullock as his attorney.

Meanwhile, at Los Angeles, Cecil Wetsel said he had declined his share of the $25,000 reward for the rescue of the De Tristan boy.

Wetsel, billed as "The Kidnap Hero," is making personal appearances at the theater. The sawmill operator and a companion were credited with the capture of the child's abductor.

"Yes, I turned down my share of the $25,000 reward," said Wetsel. I've got kids of my own."

Stephen M. Balzer, Auto Pioneer, Dies

Stephen Marius Balzer, 78, pioneer automobile manufacturer who claimed he built the motor for Prof. S. B. Langley's flying machine, which sank in the Potomac River in 1898, on its first trial, died Sunday at Andover, N. J., the Associated Press reported yesterday.

There was a dispute over his contention and Congress awarded a medal to Charles M. Manley as the engineer's builder.

Balzer's first automobile, completed in 1894, is now in the Smithsonian Institution here.

Earth to Be Broken For Auditorium

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank and chairman of the board of trustees of the George Washington University, will break ground at 10 a. m. today for the school's auditorium at Twenty-first and H streets northwest.

District officials, Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university; Mrs. Hattie M. Strong, donor of the Hattie M. Strong Residence Hall for Women and the Hall of Government; faculty members and student body will attend the ceremony. A $750,000 bequest from Abram Lisner, along with $200,000 turned over to the university by the George Washington Memorial Association, covers the land and building costs.
